I have 7 atomic piles boiling water within 300 miles of me. I have that many natural gas/fuel oil plants within a hundred miles. I can "camp out" at home indefinitely. Plenty of stove and lantern fuel. Plenty of batteries. 2 vehicles that never get below 1/3 tank and several inverters. I am planning to run the radio gear on deep cycle marine batteries with PV replenish.

Some Good benefits of Propane used for running engines.The engines last longer, Propane doesn't foul the engine oil, engines (usually) start more easily.I think Servel company still makes refrigerators that run on gas, Natural Gas, anyway.

They make special fader cleaner and lube stuff, but it's not compatible universally; sometimes it'll gum things up worse.

I still have the same can of ProGold G100 I bought back in the '90s. That's what I use for pots and switches. The stuff out now has a slightly different (less toxic) formula.

Reading a can...

Gold G5 "flushing action"
Gold GN5 "quick dry-non drip"
Gold G100 "no solvents"

A also use G5, for less critical stuff, mainly connectors, tube sockets, and the like.

Go to the Caig Laboratory website, and look for material for cleaning and lubricating sliding connections.

Faderlube Spray or FaderLube Needle Dispenser are the two products that come immediately to mind.

The different formulations between DeOxit and FaderLube are due to the nature of the metal contacts found in switches, which are cleaned with an oleic acid, and the conductive plastic/carbon composite compounds in faders which are cleaned with less aggressive solvents and require more lubrication than cleaning.

About 19 years ago, I bought a used 21 foot long 1971 Winnebago Motorhome.Before I sold it, I gave the Motorhome generator to my brother in law.I think he still has it.One cylinder engine/Onan generator.That was back around a few weeks before the Y2K when I gave him the generator.There is an Onan shop on Highway 49, a few miles South (South is Always Best) of doggy's couch.My brother in law and I took the generator to that Onan shop for them to check it out and make sure it is in Real Good running condition.The carburetor and valves needed a little of work done to them.My brother in law owns a 1986 Pace Arrow Motorhome.He doesn't drive it much, he keeps it parked by the side of his house.You can be Sure he keeps it in Real Condition.

Creating Corporations that allow useless people to produce things that are considered wealth, is creating wealth. The person organizing the production from nothing shares in the creation of that wealth. Without them creating and organizing a place for the otherwise unproductive people to create wealth, no wealth would be created.

Where as the people on their own could NOT have produced anything of wealth due to a lack of ability.

Who created the Microsoft Wealth? Without Bill Gates, who would have created personal computing that would become a world wide success.

The original topic of this thread was "Why?" - my question WHY? is why a guy as smart and well-informed as you, "art" is hanging around this joint. You could be really useful in a much wider and more esteemed arena.

He did not create it so much as concentrate it. Now, he's beginning to spread it around again...but still, not creating it.

Peter and Dave, my thanks to both of you. My old regular DeOxit may not be the right stuff then (although the original shot of it has kept the pots working well for 7 years up to this month).

What does your Operating system say?

That's who created it.

Others were created but they are not creating as much wealth.

Again, concentrating wealth. It has nothing to do with who made the operating system, but whether or not the wealth he gained was NOT at the expense of anyone else. The only way the human race gains wealth is to mine it or harvest it from the earth - and even then, the earth loses something. The resource is finite, and only its redistribution decides who gets rich and who stays poor. You're just kididing yourself otherwise. You cannot get something from nothing.

Yes. Demonstrably true in every regard. Not the whole story, but a big part of it.

NOT true at all....

wealth is a measure of both "need and work" wealth is stored work that has value. If the stored work becomes useless to anyone then it has zero value and is no longer wealth.

Wealth can be gold or it can be a painting or it can be the copywrite ownership of Windows-7.

The day Windows-8 is released, then Windows-7 will NOT represent as much wealth.

Soon the U.S. dollar will NO longer be a symbol of wealth, they will have diminishing value to each of us and will not retain wealth because they are not of value to people.... while a can of soup may be of more value than all the dollars you can carry. Owning cans of soup may be real wealth while owning cash is like having a pet rock.

In many cases the value is in the structure of the resource rather than the resource itself. We wouldn't not think to eat again today the resources we so gladly ate yesterday.

If it were not for our economic structure I would say who did what was a waste of time and emotional effort. I feel we are indeed played as pawns by people who create misery for their own happiness. It is a pithetic life for which we all pay. The seven deadly sins are wrath, greed, sloth, pride, lust, envy, and gluttony. At times I get quite peeved by those who promote a path towards these sins.

By moving towards technologies that utilize renewable resources (it's the structure that matters) we make our lives easier. This morning a woman said with pride how plentify hispanics have become in the US. I care not about the racial mix but the growth in our population to achieve it. People who buy into the notion of strife for a better life create that strife. The more of us there are the greater the need for usable resources. A move towards renewable resources doesn't make our life easier if it is offset by increased population. People have to envision the world they would like to see real before it can be achieved. If that means a world of winners and losers then that's the world we will have.

- Who created the Microsoft Wealth?
- Without Bill Gates, who would have D'Oh ! Those Two Guy from Apple : Sure did very well without BG@MS - imho ~ RHF

-a-minor-historical-point-
It was the IBM PC and IBM Corp that was the the 'creative force' that caused BG@MS and MS Corp to become what it was in the 1990s.

yet 8 of 10 use Windows.....

Had you cornered the market and bought all the "buggy whips" 130 years ago(billions of dollars invested) and you now try to realize your fortune and cash in your wealth by selling your buggy whips..... you may find that they're no longer of any real value and you now have no wealth. In fact, depending on the chemicals used to make them, they may now be a liability rather than an asset. It may cost you to get rid of the buggy whips in an environmentally safe way.

Wealth is a measure of need or value as well as a measure of stored work.

BG@MS Did NOT 'Create' The Wealth :

The Wealth Existed and was Distributed more Evenly and Equability across the Customer Population {Wealth Base}

BG@MS Did Promoted, Refined and Monopolized
a Set of Products and Services to that Customer Population {Wealth Base} -and- Those Customers Freely Redistributed Their Wealth {by Buy/Buyers/
Buying} from&to BG@MS and MS Corp.

BG@MS and MS Corp Simply Aggregated {Collected and Concentrate} the Wealth of Others {The Customer Wealth Base} to Himself and MS Corp.

It Is Time For BG@MS To Give Back {Pay-Back} This Redistributed Wealth To That Very Same Customer Population {Wealth Base}
* BG@MS Can Keep a Billion Dollars for Himself; Plus a Billion Dollars for Misses BG; and a Billion Dollars for each of the BG Children (3) :
That's 5 Billion Dollars :
But the Rest of the Billions Should Be Redistributed {Paid-Back} To The Customer Population {Wealth Base}
In The Name of Economic Social Justice For All.

Power {Wealth} To The Customers/Consumers !
{ From Whom All Redistributed Wealth Flows }

and that's the way 'i' see it ~ RHF

Right - Windows 8 will grab that wealth from Windows 7, and MS will divert yet more wealth from people who might otherwise be satisfied with what they have. MS gets richer, the rest of us get poorer.
Redistribution and reconcentration. It ain't new, it's just repackaged.

Cans of soup are produced by the earth with human energy added (which also came from the earth). If it represents wealth, it's the wealth of the entire Earth, which then only makes up its loss when humans die and go back to it.

By the way, the first 'a' in Cardenas has an accent over it; that did not come out on my standard "qwerty" keyboard ;-) It appears that his titulo is "Capitan de Fragata-EM, DIRECTOR" also with an accent over the first 'a' in Capitan. No tildes anywhere in his name.

Two years ago, I bought a spray can of CRC Electrical Grade QD Contact Cleaner.Quick Drying Formula.Leaves No Residue.Plastic Safe.

I used a little bit of it two or three times.I don't think it is 'Amazing' stuff'.I think I paid over $20.00 for it.NOT worth the money, in my opinion.

I also have an old spray can of NOCO H2SO4 Battery Cleaner And Acid Detector.It is made/intended for use on car/truck batteries.I like it, it works Real Good.I think I bought it at the Goodwill store about twenty years ago.

Pre World War II recordings on 6940.0 kHz AM - tune in around 0100 UTC with pre WWII broadcasts, a speech and music - with an ID probably taken from intervalsignals.com - Germany calling repeated twice and DX-B Bremen ID "on the 31 meter band" which of course is not correct. The German National Anthem played at 0122 UTC and music continued @ 0130 UTC. Address given as germanycalling@gmail.com in a British accent. An interval signal repeated before s/off @ 0140 UTC.

It seems that you are the one who should do some research. Do a Google Search on "ground antenna" and prove me wrong. You also might want to call the US Navy "morons" since they did research on the matter as far back as 1919 and are still involved with this subject as it relates to submarines.
Right now I am listening to Alex Jones on 4.840 mhz via my Icom R71-A connected to my ground antenna. Signal quality is fine.

nah,,, Nah... NAH ! ! !

Not even that : IBM created to broad a ranging PC Specification for their IBM PC Hardware that enabled
'others' to "Clone" {Re-Engineer} their IBM PC Designs; at the Assembly Component Level {Kit PCs} and enter the PC Market Place.

? Remember the first few Years of the PC 'Clones' !

This caused a Separate need for a Parallel {Clone} Opperating System to Run on the PC Clones.

! Hence IBM-DOS -morphed-into- MS-DOS !

There Was a Moment-In-Time -when- All Roads
Lead To BG@MS and MS Corp; and BG@MS
Capitalized On That Historical Dynamic Market
Point [.] -and-the-rest-is-history-

-where-as-
Apples History is One of Strict Hardware and Software Control Plus Licensing of it all; and a relatively 'limited' Market Share as a result.

Myth: Hitler was a leftist. Fact: Nearly all of Hitler's beliefs placed him on the far right. Summary Many conservatives accuse Hitler of being a leftist, on the grounds that his party was named "National Socialist." But socialism requires worker ownership and control of the means of production. In Nazi Germany, private capitalist individuals owned the means of production, and they in turn were frequently controlled by the Nazi party and state. True socialism does not advocate such economic dictatorship -- it can only be democratic. Hitler's other political beliefs place him almost always on the far right. He advocated racism over racial tolerance, eugenics over freedom of reproduction, merit over equality, competition over cooperation, power politics and militarism over pacifism, dictatorship over democracy, capitalism over Marxism, realism over idealism, nationalism over internationalism, exclusiveness over inclusiveness, common sense over theory or science, pragmatism over principle, and even held friendly relations with the Church, even though he was an atheist. Argument To most people, Hitler's beliefs belong to the extreme far right. For example, most conservatives believe in patriotism and a strong military; carry these beliefs far enough, and you arrive at Hitler's warring nationalism. This association has long been something of an embarrassment to the far right. To deflect such criticism, conservatives have recently launched a counter-attack, claiming that Hitler was a socialist, and therefore belongs to the political left, not the right. The primary basis for this claim is that Hitler was a National Socialist. The word "National" evokes the state, and the word "Socialist" openly identifies itself as such. However, there is no academic controversy over the status of this term: it was a misnomer. Misnomers are quite common in the history of political labels. Examples include the German Democratic Republic (which was neither) and Vladimir Zhirinovsky's "Liberal Democrat" party (which was also neither). The true question is not whether Hitler called his party "socialist," but whether or not it actually was. In fact, socialism has never been tried at the national level anywhere in the world. This may surprise some people -- after all, wasn't the Soviet Union socialist? The answer is no. Many nations and political parties have called themselves "socialist," but none have actually tried socialism. To understand why, we should revisit a few basic political terms. Perhaps the primary concern of any political ideology is who gets to own and control the means the production. This includes factories, farmlands, machinery, etc. Generally there have been three approaches to this question. The first was aristocracy, in which a ruling elite owned the land and productive wealth, and peasants and serfs had to obey their orders in return for their livelihood. The second is capitalism, which has disbanded the ruling elite and allows a much broader range of private individuals to own the means of production. However, this ownership is limited to those who can afford to buy productive wealth; nearly all workers are excluded. The third (and untried) approach is socialism, where everyone owns and controls the means of production, by means of the vote. As you can see, there is a spectrum here, ranging from a few people owning productive wealth at one end, to everyone owning it at the other. Socialism has been proposed in many forms. The most common is social democracy, where workers vote for their supervisors, as well as their industry representatives to regional or national congresses. Another proposed form is anarcho-socialism, where workers own companies that would operate on a free market, without any central government at all. As you can see, a central planning committee is hardly a necessary feature of socialism. The primary feature is worker ownership of production. The Soviet Union failed to qualify as socialist because it was a dictatorship over workers -- that is, a type of aristocracy, with a ruling elite in Moscow calling all the shots. Workers cannot own or control anything under a totalitarian government. In variants of socialism that call for a central government, that government is always a strong or even direct democracy… never a dictatorship. It doesn't matter if the dictator claims to be carrying out the will of the people, or calls himself a "socialist" or a "democrat." If the people themselves are not in control, then the system is, by definition, non-democratic and non-socialist. And what of Nazi Germany? The idea that workers controlled the means of production in Nazi Germany is a bitter joke. It was actually a combination of aristocracy and capitalism. Technically, private businessmen owned and controlled the means of production. The Nazi "Charter of Labor" gave employers complete power over their workers. It established the employer as the "leader of the enterprise," and read: "The leader of the enterprise makes the decisions for the employees and laborers in all matters concerning the enterprise." (1) The employer, however, was subject to the frequent orders of the ruling Nazi elite. After the Nazis took power in 1933, they quickly established a highly controlled war economy under the direction of Dr. Hjalmar Schacht. Like all war economies, it boomed, making Germany the second nation to recover fully from the Great Depression, in 1936. (The first nation was Sweden, in 1934. Following Keynesian-like policies, the Swedish government spent its way out of the Depression, proving that state economic policies can be successful without resorting to dictatorship or war.) Prior to the Nazi seizure of power in 1933, worker protests had spread all across Germany in response to the Great Depression. During his drive to power, Hitler exploited this social unrest by promising workers to strengthen their labor unions and increase their standard of living. But these were empty promises; privately, he was reassuring wealthy German businessmen that he would crack down on labor once he achieved power. Historian William Shirer describes the Nazi's dual strategy:

• "The party had to play both sides of the tracks. It had to allow [Nazi officials] Strasser, Goebbels and the crank Feder to beguile the masses with the cry that the National Socialists were truly 'socialists' and against the money barons. On the other hand, money to keep the party going had to be wheedled out of those who had an ample supply of it." (2)

Once in power, Hitler showed his true colors by promptly breaking all his promises to workers. The Nazis abolished trade unions, collective bargaining and the right to strike. An organization called the "Labor Front" replaced the old trade unions, but it was an instrument of the Nazi party and did not represent workers. According to the law that created it, "Its task is to see that every individual should be able… to perform the maximum of work." Workers would indeed greatly boost their productivity under Nazi rule. But they also became exploited. Between 1932 and 1936, workers wages fell, from 20.4 to 19.5 cents an hour for skilled labor, and from 16.1 to 13 cents an hour for unskilled labor. (3) Yet workers did not protest. This was partly because the Nazis had restored order to the economy, but an even bigger reason was that the Nazis would have cracked down on any protest.

There was no part of Nazism, therefore, that even remotely resembled socialism. But what about the political nature of Nazism in general? Did it belong to the left, or to the right? Let's take a closer look:

The politics of Nazism

The political right is popularly associated with the following principles. Of course, it goes without saying that these are generalizations, and not every person on the far right believes in every principle, or disbelieves its opposite. Most people's political beliefs are complex, and cannot be neatly pigeonholed. This is as true of Hitler as anyone. But since the far right is trying peg Hitler as a leftist, it's worth reviewing the tenets popularly associated with the right. These include:

• Individualism over collectivism.
• Racism or racial segregation over racial tolerance.
• Eugenics over freedom of reproduction.
• Merit over equality.
• Competition over cooperation.
• Power politics and militarism over pacifism.
• One-person rule or self-rule over democracy.
• Capitalism over Marxism.
• Realism over idealism.
• Nationalism over internationalism.
• Exclusiveness over inclusiveness.
• Meat-eating over vegetarianism.
• Gun ownership over gun control
• Common sense over theory or science.
• Pragmatism over principle.
• Religion over secularism.

Let's review these spectrums one by one, and see where Hitler stood in his own words. Ultimately, Hitler's views are not monolithically conservative -- on a few issues, his views are complex and difficult to label. But as you will see, the vast majority of them belong on the far right:

Individualism over collectivism.

Many conservatives argue that Hitler was a leftist because he subjugated the individual to the state. However, this characterization is wrong, for several reasons.

The first error is in assuming that this is exclusively a liberal trait. Actually, U.S. conservatives take considerable pride in being patriotic Americans, and they deeply honor those who have sacrificed their lives for their country. The Marine Corps is a classic example: as every Marine knows, all sense of individuality is obliterated in the Marines Corps, and one is subject first, foremost and always to the group.

The second error is forgetting that all human beings subscribe to individualism and collectivism. If you believe that you are personally responsible for taking care of yourself, you are an individualist. If you freely belong and contribute to any group -- say, an employing business, church, club, family, nation, or cause -- then you are a collectivist as well. Neither of these traits makes a person inherently "liberal" or "conservative," and to claim that you are an "evil socialist" because you champion a particular group is not a serious argument.

Political scientists therefore do not label people "liberal" or "conservative" on the basis of their individualism or collectivism. Much more important is how they approach their individualism and collectivism. What groups does a person belong to? How is power distributed in the group? Does it practice one-person rule, minority rule, majority rule, or self-rule? Liberals believe in majority rule. Hitler practiced one-person rule. Thus, there is no comparison.

And on that score, conservatives might feel that they are off the hook, too, because they claim to prefer self-rule to one-person rule. But their actions say otherwise. Many of the institutions that conservatives favor are really quite dictatorial: the military, the church, the patriarchal family, the business firm.

Hitler himself downplayed all groups except for the state, which he raised to supreme significance in his writings. However, he did not identify the state as most people do, as a random collection of people in artificially drawn borders. Instead, he identified the German state as its racially pure stock of German or Aryan blood. In Mein Kampf, Hitler freely and interchangeably used the terms "Aryan race," "German culture" and "folkish state." To him they were synonyms, as the quotes below show. There were citizens inside Germany (like Jews) who were not part of Hitler's state, while there were Germans outside Germany (for example, in Austria) who were. But the main point is that Hitler's political philosophy was not really based on "statism" as we know it today. It was actually based on racism -- again, a subject that hits uncomfortably closer to home for conservatives, not liberals.

As Hitler himself wrote:
"The main plank in the Nationalist Socialist program is to abolish the liberalistic concept of the individual and the Marxist concept of humanity and to substitute for them the folk community, rooted in the soil and bound together by the bond of its common blood." (4)

"The state is a means to an end. Its end lies in the preservation and advancement of a community of physically and psychically homogenous creatures. This preservation itself comprises first of all existence as a race… Thus, the highest purpose of a folkish state is concern for the preservation of those original racial elements which bestow culture and create the beauty and dignity of a higher mankind. We, as Aryans, can conceive of the state only as the living organism of a nationality which… assures the preservation of this nationality…" (5)

"The German Reich as a state must embrace all Germans and has the task, not only of assembling and preserving the most valuable stocks of basic racial elements in this people, but slowly and surely of raising them to a dominant position." (6)
And it was in the service of this racial state that Hitler encourage individuals to sacrifice themselves:
"In [the Aryan], the instinct for self-preservation has reached its noblest form, since he willingly subordinates his own ego to the life of the community and, if the hour demands it, even sacrifices it." (7)

"This state of mind, which subordinates the interests of the ego to the conservation of the community, is really the first premise for every truly human culture." (8)
Racism or racial segregation over racial tolerance.
"All the human culture, all the results of art, science, and technology that we see before us today, are almost exclusively the creative product of the Aryan." (9)

"Aryan races -- often absurdly small numerically -- subject foreign peoples, and then… develop the intellectual and organizational capacities dormant within them." (10)

"If beginning today all further Aryan influence on Japan should stop… Japan's present rise in science and technology might continue for a short time; but even in a few years the well would dry up… the present culture would freeze and sink back into the slumber from which it awakened seven decades ago by the wave of Aryan culture." (11)

"Every racial crossing leads inevitably sooner or later to the decline of the hybrid product…" (12)

"It is the function above all of the Germanic states first and foremost to call a fundamental halt to any further bastardization." (13)

"What we must fight for is to safeguard the existence and reproduction of our race and our people, the sustenance of our children and the purity of our blood…" (14)
Eugenics over freedom of reproduction
"The folkish philosophy of life must succeed in bringing about that nobler age in which men no longer are concerned with breeding dogs, horses, and cats, but in elevating man himself…" (15)

"The folkish state must make up for what everyone else today has neglected in this field. It must set race in the center of all life. It must take care to keep it pure… It must see to it that only the healthy beget children; that there is only one disgrace: despite one's own sickness and deficiencies, to bring children into the world, and one highest honor: to renounce doing so. And conversely it must be considered reprehensible: to withhold healthy children from the nation. Here the state… must put the most modern medical means in the service of this knowledge. It must declare unfit for propagation all who are in any way visibly sick or who have inherited a disease and therefore pass it on…" (16)
Merit over equality.
"The best state constitution and state form is that which, with the most unquestioned certainty, raises the best minds in the national community to leading position and leading influence. But as in economic life, the able men cannot be appointed from above, but must struggle through for themselves…" (17)

"It must not be lamented if so many men set out on the road to arrive at the same goal: the most powerful and swiftest will in this way be recognized, and will be the victor." (p. 512.)

Competition over cooperation.
"Those who want to live, let them fight, and those who do not want to fight in this world of eternal struggle do not deserve to live." (18)

"It must never be forgotten that nothing that is really great in this world has ever been achieved by coalitions, but that it has always been the success of a single victor. Coalition successes bear by the very nature of their origin the germ of future crumbling, in fact of the loss of what has already been achieved. Great, truly world-shaking revolutions of a spiritual nature are not even conceivable and realizable except as the titanic struggles of individual formations, never as enterprises of coalitions." (19)

"The idea of struggle is old as life itself, for life is only preserved because other living things perish through struggle… In this struggle, the stronger, the more able, win, while the less able, the weak, lose. Struggle is the father of all things… It is not by the principles of humanity that man lives or is able to preserve himself in the animal world, but solely by means of the most brutal struggle… If you do not fight for life, then life will never be won." (20)
Power politics and militarism over pacifism.

Allan Bullock, probably the world's greatest Hitler historian, sums up Hitler's political method in one sentence:
"Stripped of their romantic trimmings, all Hitler's ideas can be reduced to a simple claim for power which recognizes only one relationship, that of domination, and only one argument, that of force." (21)
The following quotes by Hitler portray his rather stunning contempt for pacifism:
"If the German people in its historic development had possessed that herd unity [defined here by Hitler as racial solidarity] which other peoples enjoyed, the German Reich today would doubtless be mistress of the globe. World history would have taken a different course, and no one can distinguish whether in this way we would not have obtained what so many blinded pacifists today hope to gain by begging, whining and whimpering: a peace, supported not by the palm branches of tearful, pacifist female mourners, but based on the victorious sword of a master people, putting the world into the service of a higher culture." (22)

"We must clearly recognize the fact that the recovery of the lost territories is not won through solemn appeals to the Lord or through pious hopes in a League of Nations, but only by force of arms." (23)

"In actual fact the pacifistic-humane idea is perfectly all right perhaps when the highest type of man has previously conquered and subjected the world to an extent that makes him the sole ruler of this earth… Therefore, first struggle and then perhaps pacifism." (24)
One-person rule or self-rule over democracy.
"The young [Nazi] movement is in its nature and inner organization anti-parliamentarian; that is, it rejects… a principle of majority rule in which the leader is degraded to the level of mere executant of other people's wills and opinion." (25)

"The [Nazi party] should not become a constable of public opinion, but must dominate it. It must not become a servant of the masses, but their master!" (26)

"By rejecting the authority of the individual and replacing it by the numbers of some momentary mob, the parliamentary principle of majority rule sins against the basic aristocratic principle of Nature…" (27)

"For there is one thing we must never forget… the majority can never replace the man. And no more than a hundred empty heads make one wise man will an heroic decision arise from a hundred cowards." (28)

"There must be no majority decisions, but only responsible persons, and the word 'council' must be restored to its original meaning. Surely every man will have advisers by his side, but the decision will be made by one man." (29)

"When I recognized the Jew as the leader of the Social Democracy, the scales dropped from my eyes." (30)

"The Western democracy of today is the forerunner of Marxism…" (31)

"Only a knowledge of the Jews provides the key with which to comprehend the inner, and consequently real, aims of Social Democracy." (32)
Capitalism over Marxism.

Bullock writes of Hitler's views on Marxism:
"While Hitler's attitude towards liberalism was one of contempt, towards Marxism he showed an implacable hostility… Ignoring the profound differences between Communism and Social Democracy in practice and the bitter hostility between the rival working class parties, he saw in their common ideology the embodiment of all that he detested -- mass democracy and a leveling egalitarianism as opposed to the authoritarian state and the rule of an elite; equality and friendship among peoples as opposed to racial inequality and the domination of the strong; class solidarity versus national unity; internationalism versus nationalism." (33)
As Hitler himself would write:
"The German state is gravely attacked by Marxism." (34)

"In the years 1913 and 1914, I… expressed the conviction that the question of the future of the German nation was the question of destroying Marxism." (35)

"In the economic sphere Communism is analogous to democracy in the political sphere." (36)

"The Marxists will march with democracy until they succeed in indirectly obtaining for their criminal aims the support of even the national intellectual world, destined by them for extinction." (37)

"Marxism itself systematically plans to hand the world over to the Jews." (38)

"The Jewish doctrine of Marxism rejects the aristocratic principle of Nature and replaces the eternal privilege of power and strength by the mass of numbers and their dead weight." (39)
Realism over idealism.

Hitler was hardly an "idealist" in the sense that political scientists use the term. The standard definition of an idealist is someone who believes that cooperation and peaceful coexistence can occur among peoples. A realist, however, is someone who sees the world as an unstable and dangerous place, and prepares for war, if not to deter it, then to survive it. It goes without saying that Hitler was one of the greatest realists of all time. Nonetheless, Hitler had his own twisted utopia, which he described:
"We are not simple enough, either, to believe that it could ever be possible to bring about a perfect era. But this relieves no one of the obligation to combat recognized errors, to overcome weaknesses, and strive for the ideal. Harsh reality of its own accord will create only too many limitations. For that very reason, however, man must try to serve the ultimate goal, and failures must not deter him, any more than he can abandon a system of justice merely because mistakes creep into it…" (40)

"The same boy who feels like throwing up when he hears the tirades of a pacifist 'idealist' is ready to give up his life for the ideal of his nationality." (41)
Nationalism over internationalism.
"The nationalization of our masses will succeed only when… their international poisoners are exterminated." (42)

"The severest obstacle to the present-day worker's approach to the national community lies not in the defense of his class interests, but in his international leadership and attitude which are hostile to the people and the fatherland." (43)

"Thus, the reservoir from which the young [Nazi] movement must gather its supporters will primarily be the masses of our workers. Its work will be to tear these away from the international delusion… and lead them to the national community…" (44)
Exclusiveness over inclusiveness.
"Thus men without exception wander about in the garden of Nature; they imagine that they know practically everything and yet with few exceptions pass blindly by one of the most patent principles of Nature: the inner segregation of the species of all living beings on earth." (45)

"The greatness of every mighty organization embodying an idea in this world lies in the religious fanaticism and intolerance with which, fanatically convinced of its own right, it intolerantly imposes its will against all others." (46)

Meat-eating over vegetarianism.

It may seem ridiculous to include this issue in a review of Hitler's politics, but, believe it or not, conservatives on the Internet frequently equate Hitler's vegetarianism with the vegetarianism practised by liberals concerned about the environment and the ethical treatment of animals.

Hitler's vegetarianism had nothing to do with his political beliefs. He became a vegetarian shortly after the death of his girlfriend and half-niece, Geli Raubal. Their relationship was a stormy one, and it ended in her apparent suicide. There were rumors that Hitler had arranged her murder, but Hitler would remain deeply distraught over her loss for the rest of his life. As one historian writes:
"Curiously, shortly after her death, Hitler looked with disdain on a piece of ham being served during breakfast and refused to eat it, saying it was like eating a corpse. From that moment on, he refused to eat meat." (47)
Hitler's vegetarianism, then, was no more than a phobia, triggered by an association with his niece's death.

Gun ownership over gun control

Perhaps one of the pro-gun lobby's favorite arguments is that if German citizens had had the right to keep and bear arms, Hitler would have never been able to tyrannize the country. And to this effect, pro-gun advocates often quote the following:
"1935 will go down in history. For the first time, a civilized nation has full gun registration. Our streets will be safer, our police more efficient, and the world will follow our lead into the future." - Adolf Hitler
However, this quote is almost certainly a fraud. There is no reputable record of him ever making it: neither at the Nuremberg rallies, nor in any of his weekly radio addresses. Furthermore, there was no reason for him to even make such a statement; for Germany already had strict gun control as a term of surrender in the Treaty of Versailles. The Allies had wanted to make Germany as impotent as possible, and one of the ways they did that was to disarm its citizenry. Only a handful of local authorities were allowed arms at all, and the few German citizens who did possess weapons were already subject to full gun registration. Seen in this light, the above quote makes no sense whatsoever.

The Firearms Policy Journal (January 1997) writes:
"The Nazi Party did not ride to power confiscating guns. They rode to power on the inability of the Weimar Republic to confiscate their guns. They did not consolidate their power confiscating guns either. There is no historical evidence that Nazis ever went door to door in Germany confiscating guns. The Germans had a fetish about paperwork and documented everything. These searches and confiscations would have been carefully recorded. If the documents are there, let them be presented as evidence."

On April 12, 1928, five years before Hitler seized power, Germany passed the Law on Firearms and Ammunition. This law substantially tightened restrictions on gun ownership in an effort to curb street violence between Nazis and Communists. The law was ineffectual and poorly enforced. It was not until March 18, 1938 -- five years after Hitler came to power -- that the Nazis passed the German Weapons Law, their first known change in the firearm code. And this law actually relaxed restrictions on citizen firearms.

Common sense over theory or science.

Hitler was notorious for his anti-intellectualism:
"The youthful brain should in general not be burdened with things ninety-five percent of which it cannot use and hence forgets again… In many cases, the material to be learned in the various subjects is so swollen that only a fraction of it remains in the head of the individual pupil, and only a fraction of this abundance can find application, while on the other hand it is not adequate for the man working and earning his living in a definite field." (48)

"Knowledge above the average can be crammed into the average man, but it remains dead, and in the last analysis sterile knowledge. The result is a man who may be a living dictionary but nevertheless falls down miserably in all special situations and decisive moments in life." (49)

"The folkish state must not adjust its entire educational work primarily to the inoculation of mere knowledge, but to the breeding of absolutely healthy bodies. The training of mental abilities is only secondary. And here again, first place must be taken by the development of character, especially the promotion of will-power and determination, combined with the training of joy in responsibility, and only in last place comes scientific schooling." (50)

"A people of scholars, if they are physically degenerate, weak-willed and cowardly pacifists, will not storm the heavens, indeed, they will not be able to safeguard their existence on this earth." (51)
Pragmatism over principle.
"The question of the movement's inner organization is one of expediency and not of principle." (52)
Religion over secularism.

Hitler's views on religion were complex. Although ostensibly an atheist, he considered himself a cultural Catholic, and frequently evoked God, the Creator and Providence in his writings. Throughout his life he would remain an envious admirer of the Christian Church and its power over the masses. Here is but one example:
"We can learn by the example of the Catholic Church. Though its doctrinal edifice… comes into collision with exact science and research, it is none the less unwilling to sacrifice so much as one little syllable of its dogmas. It has recognized quite correctly that its power of resistance does not lie in its lesser or greater adaptation to the scientific findings of the moment, which in reality are always fluctuating, but rather in rigidly holding to dogmas once established, for it is only such dogmas which lend to the whole body the character of faith. And so it stands today more firmly than ever." (53)

Hitler also saw a useful purpose for the Church:
"The great masses of people do not consist of philosophers; precisely for the masses, [religious] faith is often the sole foundation of a moral attitude… For the political man, the value of a religion must be estimated less by its deficiencies than by the virtue of a visibly better substitute. As long as this appears to be lacking, what is present can be demolished only by fools or criminals." (54)
Hitler thus advocated freedom of religious belief. Although he would later press churches into the service of Nazism, often at the point of a gun, Hitler did not attempt to impose a state religion or mandate the basic philosophical content of German religions. As long as they did not interfere with his program, he allowed them to continue fuctioning. And this policy was foreshadowed in his writings:
"For the political leader the religious doctrines and institutions of his people must always remain inviolable; or else he has no right to be in politics…" (55)

"Political parties have nothing to do with religious problems, as long as these are not alien to the nation, undermining the morals and ethics of the race; just as religion cannot be amalgamated with the scheming of political parties." (56)

"Worst of all, however, is the devastation wrought by the misuse of religious conviction for political ends." (57)

"Therefore, let every man be active, each in his own denomination if you please, and let every man take it as his first and most sacred duty to oppose anyone who in his activity by word or deed steps outside the confines of his religious community and tries to butt into the other." (58)
Hitler was raised a Catholic, even going to school for two years at the monastery at Lambauch, Austria. As late as 24 he still called himself a Catholic, but somewhere along the way he became an atheist. It is highly doubtful that this was an intellectual decision, as a reading of his disordered thoughts in Mein Kampf will attest. The decision was most likely a pragmatic one, based on power and personal ambition. Bullock reveals an interesting anecdote showing how these considerations worked on the young Hitler. After five years of eking out a miserable existence in Vienna and four years of war, Hitler walked into his first German Worker's Party meeting:
"'Under the dim light shed by a grimy gas-lamp I could see four people sitting around a table…' As Hitler frankly acknowledges, this very obscurity was an attraction. It was only in a party which, like himself, was beginning at the bottom that he had any prospect of playing a leading part and imposing his ideas. In the established parties there was no room for him, he would be a nobody." (59)

Hitler probably realized that a frustrated artist and pipe-dreamer like himself would have no chance of achieving power in the world-wide, 2000-year old Christian Church. It was most likely for this reason that he rejected Christianity and pursued a political life instead. Yet, curiously enough, he never renounced his membership in the Catholic Church, and the Church never excommunicated him. Nor did the Church place his Mein Kampf on the Index of Prohibited Books, in spite of its knowledge of his atrocities. Later the Church would come under intense criticism for its friendly and cooperative relationship with Hitler. A brief review of this history is instructive.

In 1933, the Catholic Center Party cast its large and decisive vote in favor of Hitler's Enabling Bill. This bill essentially gave Chancellor Hitler the sweeping dictatorial powers he was seeking. Historian Guenter Lewy describes a meeting between Hitler and the German Catholic authorities shortly afterwards:
"On 26 April 1933 Hitler had a conversation with Bishop Berning and Monsignor Steinmann [the Catholic leadership in Germany]. The subject was the common fight against liberalism, Socialism and Bolshevism, discussed in the friendliest terms. In the course of the conversation Hitler said that he was only doing to the Jews what the church had done to them over the past fifteen hundred years. The prelates did not contradict him." (60)
As anyone familiar with Christian history knows, the Church has always been a primary source of anti-Semitism. Hitler's anti-Semitism therefore found a receptive audience among Catholic authorities. The Church also had an intense fear and hatred of Russian communism, and Hitler's attack on Russia was the best that could have happened. The Jesuit Michael Serafin wrote: "It cannot be denied that [Pope] Pius XII's closest advisors for some time regarded Hitler's armoured divisions as the right hand of God." (61) As Pope Pius himself would say after Germany conquered Poland: "Let us end this war between brothers and unite our forces against the common enemy of atheism" -- Russia. (62)

Once Hitler assumed power, he signed a Concordat, or agreement, with the Catholic Church. Eugenio Pacelli (the man who would eventually become Pope Pius XII) was the Vatican diplomat who drew up the Concordat, and he considered it a triumph. In return for promises which Hitler increasingly broke, the Church dissolved all Catholic organizations in Germany, including the Catholic Center Party. Bishops were to take an oath of loyalty to the Nazi regime. Clergy were to see to the pastoral care of Germany's armed forces (regardless of what those armed forces did). (63)

The Concordat eliminated all Catholic resistance to Hitler; after this, the German bishops gave Hitler their full and unqualified support. A bishops' conference at Fulda, 1933, resulted in agreement with Hitler's case for extending Lebensraum, or German territory. (64)

Bishop Bornewasser told a congregation of Catholic young people at Trier: "With our heads high and with firm steps we have entered the new Reich and are ready to serve it body and soul." (65) Vicar-General Steinman greeted each Berlin mass with the shout, "Heil Hitler!" (66)

Hitler, on the other hand, kept up his attack on the Church. Nazi bands stormed into the few remaining Catholic institutions, beat up Catholic youths and arrested Catholic officials. The Vatican was dismayed, but it did not protest. (67) In some instances, it was hard to tell if the Church supported its own persecution. Hitler muzzled the independent Catholic press (about 400 daily papers in 1933) and subordinated it to Goebbels' Ministry of Propaganda and Enlightenment. Yet soon the Catholic Press was doing more than what the Nazis required of it -- for example, coordinating their Nazi propaganda to prepare the people for the 1940 offensive against the West. (68) Throughout the war, the Catholic press would remain one of the Third Reich's best disseminators of propaganda.

Pacelli became the new Pope Pius XII in 1939, and he immediately improved relations with Hitler. He broke protocol by personally signing a letter in German to Hitler expressing warm hopes of friendly relations. Shortly afterwards, the Church celebrated Hitler's birthday by ringing bells, flying swastika flags from church towers and holding thanksgiving services for the Fuhrer. (69) Ringing church bells to celebrate and affirm the bishops' allegiance to the Reich would become quite common throughout the war; after the German army conquered France, the church bells rang for an entire week, and swastikas flew over the churches for ten days.

But perhaps the greatest failure of Pope Pius XII was his silence over the Holocaust, even though he knew it was in progress. Although there are many heroic stories of Catholics helping Jews survive the Holocaust, they do not include Pope Pius, the Holy See, or the German Catholic authorities. When a reporter asked Pius why he did not protest the liquidation of the Jews, the Pope answered, "Dear friend, do not forget that millions of Catholics are serving in the German armies. Am I to involve them in a conflict of conscience?" (70) As perhaps the world's greatest moral leader, he was charged with precisely that responsibility.

The history of Hitler and the Church reveals a relationship built on mutual distrust and philosophical rejection, but also shared goals, benefits, admiration, envy, friendliness, and ultimate alliance.

Roger - I don't doubt that there has been some good research done on this - but I have to tell you, listening to Alex Jones on 4840 anywhere in the US on any radio using any antenna is hardly a test. I can hear him with my antenna disconnected, and I'm out here in California.

There are no hydrogen molecules in water and the oxygen in water isn't flammable either.

Water is inert and contains no energy to be used. Get some basic chemistry first.

Quite simply put, for some of the boneheads here.

NiCads and NiMh batterries are designed to take a current charge forever.

Oh yeah, I can charge a battery and use it six months later fully charged. The nicads will be cooked because you keep them on charge, just in case you need them but when you remember them six months later they are cooked and won't last 5 minutes in the camera.

It takes a complete idiot to deny they can short out all by themselves. Three, loose in a bag can short themselves out.

Did they have electricity back in 1994?

oooops.... Wouldn't light your home for a 1/2 second.
OK..OK.. multiply the figures time 100 or 1000. Now it would light a 100W bulb for 1 second.

Has HD Radio Reached a Tipping Point?

From time to time we hear word that HD Radio is near a tipping point, a point where awareness and interest in HD Radio reaches critical mass and the medium takes off.

If Google is any indication, HD Radio has already reached a tipping point, a tip not toward success, but instead toward oblivion.

Google Insights is a tool to track interest in a topic or product using search activity as the metric. Type in Charlie Sheen, and you'll find that interest in Sheen started taking off on February 25th, and exploded on March 2nd. Aside from a secondary peak on March 8th, interest has steadily declined since.

The chart above shows interest in Pandora radio. Pandora is an interesting study because despite continued growth over the last few years, interest actually peaked in early 2009. Since then, interest has fallen off 50%.

With registered users topping 80 million, maybe everyone knows about Pandora by now and there's no need to search for it.

HD Radio is in a very different place. With limited awareness of HD and very slow set sales, HD needs to be in a growth mode when it comes to search.

If we saw growing numbers of listeners using Google to learn more about HD Radio, it might mean HD Radio is gaining momentum, and it is just a matter of time before people start buying HD radios.

Unfortunately, interest in HD is declining, not growing. Interest peaked in December 2007, and has been steadily declining since. Each December there is a seasonal peak, as there is for most tech gifts, but interest in each subsequent Christmas season has dropped.

Interest in HD has fallen by two-thirds since its 2007 peak.

Graphing Pandora and HD Radio against one another shows the dramatic difference between the two service's arc of interest. The tipping point for HD Radio actually occurred in 2007. It was the year that interest in Pandora exceeded interest in HD, and since then HD interest has steadily eroded.

While search interest is just one metric, declining interest is one more negative sign of HD Radio's struggle to gain traction.

As an aside, HD channels are showing some signs of life in Arbitron, apparently fueled by 250 watt FM translator simulcasts. Maybe AM broadcasters should lobby for commercial low power FM allocations rather than more HD power!

I asked for comments on the subject matter and not criticism from the little people. My test of a "ground antenna" at this location consisted of signal reception from Ham Radio operators. The signals I received were their voice transmissions on 3.860 LSB, 3.950 LSB, and 3.970 LSB. Those signals were weak/readable with very little static. Recepton from some of the Big Gun SW stations was impressive. It was an interesting test and one that I will expand upon in the future. All of the required information can be obtained from the Internet to include US Patent information on a "ground antenna".

All solar indicators were lower again for the second consecutive week. Average daily sunspot numbers declined over 28 points from the week before to 40.9, and average daily solar flux was off over 18 points to 94.8.

But looking at solar images from the STEREO mission at http://stereo.gsfc.nasa.gov we can see a great deal of activity about to rotate toward us over the Sun's eastern horizon. The whole "back" side of our Sun looks very busy.

The March 24 NOAA forecast for solar flux and planetary A index sees solar flux for March 25 to April 3 at 110, 115, 120, 125, 125, 130, 130, 130, 120 and 115. Planetary A index for the same period is predicted at 5 for March 25-29, 7 on March 30-31, and 5 on April 1-3.

This indicates improving HF propagation for the near term, with geomagnetic indicators unsettled only very slightly compared to recent very quiet conditions. Conditions should be good for the CQ World Wide WPX SSB Contest this weekend, and there is a useful web site devoted to this contest at http://www.cqwpx.com.

Geophysical Institute Prague has a forecast for geomagnetic conditions quite different from NOAA, predicting quiet conditions for March 25-27, unsettled to active on March 28, unsettled March 29-30, and quiet to unsettled March 31.

Carl Luetzelschwab, K9LA pointed out that the nanoTesla values for each level of K index mentioned in last week's bulletin are actually for the Boulder, Colorado magnetometer, and the values are different for each observatory. He has a good description of how this all works at his web site, http://mysite.ncnetwork.net/k9la/Where_Do_the_K_and_A_Index_Come_From.pdf.

Jeff Hartley, N8II of Shepherdstown, West Virginia sent in a report last Saturday, March 19. He wrote, "Despite the decline in solar activity 12 meters has been consistently open to Europe every weekday this week including some Russians, Latvia, and Lithuania. As the flux has dropped off, the band has been opening later. The band was wide open to Europe at 1230Z Monday (March 14), Thursday and Friday (March 17-18) were good from about 1445Z to past 1600Z. 15 meters has been consistently good to Russia with loud signals (RL3A S9+20-30dB) and even central Asia including UK6, UK8, and UN3M (S9) worked 2 days and I even caught HS0ZDS on Wednesday right over the pole. The low K indexes seem more important than the high flux for anything close to the pole, no big surprise. VU4PB had a good signal Thursday (March 17) on 17 meters from 1300-1500Z and quite a few USA stations, including me, were getting thru the European pile for a new one."

NASA has a video at http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=aTBgHd8exI4 explaining the very low sunspot activity over the past few years.

MIT Technology Review at http://www.technologyreview.com/blog/arxiv/26568 has an article about the double-peak of many sunspot cycles.

Sunspot numbers for March 17 through 23 were 45, 35, 48, 47, 34, 31, and 46, with a mean of 40.9. 10.7 cm flux was 90.1, 87.6, 88.8, 92, 101, 99.8, and 104.6, with a mean of 94.8. Estimated planetary A indices were 3, 2, 4, 4, 4, 6, and 10, with a mean of 4.7. Estimated mid-latitude A indices were 2, 2, 2, 4, 4, 5, and 9, with a mean of 4.

IBM made the first "Desktop" computer in pretty much the same form factor we use today, and with the same basic components. They did the world a huge favor by not fighting 3rd party hardware and software.

Liberty Net: March 19, 2011

http://3950.net/2011/03/liberty-net-march-19-2011/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THE CHAT ROOM that N2SAG runs during the Liberty Net got a visit from some probably paid (and not very competent) disruptors who tried (for less than an hour, so, if their employers are reading this, donï¿½t let them bill you for more!) to conflate support for ï¿½our troopsï¿½ into support for the oligarchï¿½s latest illegal war. Needless to say, it didnï¿½t work. But you can expect any patriotic effort that exposes the crimes of the regime in Washington to draw such attention from the pension- and salary-drawing agents of Americaï¿½s enemies.

Here are a few highlights from the latest Liberty Net, the longest-running discussion net on the amateur airwaves:

ï¿½ Why is such a large part of the wealth of America concentrated in the 400 richest families, many of whom are of Middle Eastern origin and consider themselves a special, separate people? And why has this same group decided to to spend so much on bombing their erstwhile ally Qaddafi, while impoverished American grandmothers are starving? (15 minutes)

ï¿½ If the disaster in Japan had happened in urban America, there would have been mass orgies of looting, rape, and murder such as we saw in New Orleans a few years ago. But in Japan, none of that occurred. Could it be that Japan has been wise to absolutely prevent all immigration of violent Third World equatorial populations? (25 minutes)

ï¿½ Sarah Palin is the latest 2012 US presidential candidate to make a fawning, obsequious visit to the state of Israel, world headquarters of the Zionist power structure that misrules America. (59 minutes)

ï¿½ Isnï¿½t it a bit bizarre that Obamaï¿½s handlers would send him to Brazil immediately after ordering him to start another murderous, aggressive war in the Middle East? (1 hour 9 minutes)

ï¿½ Was the Israeli-created Stuxnet virus ï¿½ which targets nuclear power plant control software, and which we know has made its way to China ï¿½ involved in the failure of the Japanese atomic power stations? If so, we need a Nuremberg-style trial of those responsible for it. (1 hour 13 minutes)

ï¿½ Under the Washington regimeï¿½s ï¿½Justice Department,ï¿½ anti-bullying and anti-discrimination laws will only be enforced if the victim is a member of a ï¿½protected classï¿½ under the ï¿½civil rightsï¿½ laws. In other words, if youï¿½re a victim and youï¿½re White, nothing will be done to help you. (1 hour 45 minutes)

ï¿½ Under what conceivable law or morality does the US military arrogate to itself the ï¿½rightï¿½ to lob missiles into Libyan neighborhoods, offices, apartment buildings, and private homes? What ï¿½rightï¿½ could conceivably exist to murder Libyans who just happen to be in the wrong place at the wrong time? (2 hours 20 minutes)

ï¿½ When it comes to the ages-old power struggles in the Middle East, there is no reason for the US to be involved. We can only lose, and have nothing to gain. As the quote goes, brought to light for us by W8LDW: ï¿½The only way to win is to not play the game.ï¿½ (2 hours 40 minutes)

ï¿½ Bernard Von Nothaus and a group of patriots created an honest and completely legal silver and gold barter currency called the Liberty Dollar, in coin form and also in the form of fully redeemable certificates. There was never any allegation of dishonesty or failure to honor the certificates and they did not resemble Federal Reserve notes in any way, but Von Nothaus has now been convicted of ï¿½undermining the legitimate currency of the United Statesï¿½ and ï¿½domestic terrorismï¿½ under the counterfeiting laws (!) by an out-of-control federal prosecutor who herself should be jailed for her unconscionable persecution of a man who had the temerity to provide honest money. The regime in Washington, who pays the substantial salary of this truly evil prosecutor, has repeatedly failed to honor its certificates, and its truly counterfeit currency is based on total dishonesty and is constantly declining in value. (See http://www.kevinalfredstrom.com/2009/06/alternative-currency-now-a-crime/ and http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=IvHhqr8OeFc for some background on this case.) (4 hours 8 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to these Liberty Net recordings at home, at work, in your car, or while hiking or jogging with your portable mp3 player. And remember N2SAGï¿½s live feed during Net times that lets you hear the Liberty Net via multiple receivers ï¿½ and chat too.

Check out amateur most exciting net every Saturday night ï¿½ usually somewhere above 3950 kHz SSB (in recent weeks as high as 3990 or 3993 kHz ï¿½ we have to be flexible to evade jammers and intruders), starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Kudos and thanks go to Vic, W1WCR, for his decades of hard work for free speech and amateur radio!

4840. Questions about incoming mail, from SAmerica...

In the last year, the few QSL responses I have gotten from South America were not ALL delayed, but the response from Brasilia seemed to have some trouble getting here and came finally via registered mail. Yesterday's QSL from Ecuador, likewise, came by registered mail, although it was not delayed as far as I can tell.

RHCuba keeps threatening (by e-mail) to send a QSL, but they never come.

Is there some weird postal rule that stuff coming in from Latin America must be registered or delayed or otherwise? Does such a rule extend to other nations/continents as well?

Any insights appreciated...thanks!

IBM did fight and win battles against some of the early clones (but ultimately lost the clone wars). Also, remember the PS/2 and OS/2?
Even subsequent ISA PCs had propiertary features that contributed to their doom (as IBM tried to regain "control" of the PC market).

Thanks again for the help guys... it turned out to be that trimmer capacitor - C138. When I had opened the radio up, I had unintentionally flipped the AGC switch on, setting it to its minimum setting. That is what killed AM when I put everything back together!

Do you think this will it be a permanent fix, or does this mean the capacitor is on its way out?

http://www.nytimes.com/2011/03/25/business/economy/25tax.html?_r=2&hp

The company reported worldwide profits of $14.2 billion, and said $5.1 billion of the total came from its operations in the United States.

Its American tax bill? None. In fact, G.E. claimed a tax benefit of $3.2 billion.

That may be hard to fathom for the millions of American business owners and households now preparing their own returns, but low taxes are nothing new for G.E. The company has been cutting the percentage of its American profits paid to the Internal Revenue Service for years, resulting in a far lower rate than at most multinational companies.

Its extraordinary success is based on an aggressive strategy that mixes fierce lobbying for tax breaks and innovative accounting that enables it to concentrate its profits offshore. G.E.ï¿½s giant tax department, led by a bow-tied former Treasury official named John Samuels, is often referred to as the worldï¿½s best tax law firm. Indeed, the companyï¿½s slogan ï¿½Imagination at Workï¿½ fits this department well. The team includes former officials not just from the Treasury, but also from the I.R.S. and virtually all the tax-writing committees in Congress.

You need a wheelbarrow? Do NOT buy one of those cheapo wheelbarrows at Lowe's store! I bought one of them about three years ago.The wooden handles are made of some kind of cheap lightweight no damn good wood from China, or somewhere in Asia.One of the handles on my cheapo Lowe's wheelbarrow disintergrated and BROKE in two pieces! I am NOT lieing at all.

You want a Quakerator? Get a good running horizontal shaft one cylinder gas engine, about 10 - 12 Horsepower.Mount it on a thick wood board.Get a good cheap alternator at an auto junk yard.Put some little wheels and a junk lawn mower handle on the board.You can figure it out, Rig it up. cuhulin, Quakerators R US

Makes you wonder how long it will be before the SEC realizes that the only thing iBiquity was really selling was stock.

I'm hoping that Keefe Bartels and Galax Wolf will expand their investigation that far. Perhaps, if Struble gets it in the shorts for auto/consumer fraud, it will go into criminal fraud. The FTC does know about iBiquity, as I caught them searching on "hd radio scam", a couple of years ago. It will just take time, as there is a lot to investigate. I gort forwarded an email from Keefe Bartels that they have "very good liability facts".

Brasilia sent me a QSL letter and some tourist info. It came registered, and bore the written evidence of delays and returns all over it. Sheesh.

The most obnoxious thing I send anywhere is a cassette tape / CD-Rom with an audio recording on it. If that counts as prohibited "used consumer goods," well - I don't know what to say.

This is real familiar. I always send airmail; there is no other way, really. It's not the getting there I am worried about - it's the coming back.

I know Cuban hams mostly use QSL managers in Spain. I've got 5 or 6 QSL cards from Cuba, but none have come direct. (Either from Spain or the US for Guantanamo Bay).

I had a QSO with Arnie Coro a few weeks back and am waiting to see if he sends a QSL card. I guess I will try sending one to him and see what happens (and see what they say at the post office).

Hmmm - Interesting, could be a clue. I know RHC gets my mail - they read my letters on the air, and I get e-mails back from them with contests and stuff. It appears, however, that it may be a one-way street, for now. At this point, I'd be quite happy with an e-QSL.

Ah, HA! From Reuters:

"Cuba stops U.S. mail in new hiccup in relations"

HAVANA | Fri Jan 21, 2011 3:55pm EST

HAVANA (Reuters) - Cuba has suspended postal deliveries to the United States, its mail firm said on Friday, in a step backward for ties between neighboring countries that have made cautious progress in repairing a Cold War-era rift.

Mail services across the 90 miles of sea that separates the Caribbean island from the coast of Florida, where more than 1 million people of Cuban origin live, were suspended in 1963 following Cuba's communist revolution.

Talks between the government of U.S. President Barack Obama and Cuba's communist leadership led to the resumption of deliveries via third countries such as Mexico and Canada in 2009. Direct deliveries were under discussion.

"Until further notice Cuban post offices cannot keep accepting any type of mail for the United States," the Cuban postal company said in a statement read on state TV. It apologized to customers for the inconvenience.

The suspension follows a slowdown in services after the United States in November applied stricter anti-terrorism measures to mail deliveries from many countries including Cuba. At that time Washington requested that parcels not be sent for one month.

As a result of the security measures, the Cuban postal company said, large numbers of letters and parcels have been refused entry into the United States and returned to Cuba via third countries' airlines. That has likely made the service more costly.

A spokesman at the U.S. Postal Service said the organization was aware the security measures were causing problems for deliveries from several countries and said there were no specific restrictions on Cuba.

"The U.S. Postal Service continues to accept mail, letters and packages arriving to the United States" from Cuba, said spokesman Dave Lewin.

Obama's decision to renew postal services to and from Cuba was seen as a move toward repairing ties between the countries. Last week, Washington announced it was easing rules restricting travel by U.S. citizens to Cuba but stopped short of allowing normal tourism to the island.

Under President Raul Castro, who took over from his brother Fidel in 2009, Cuba has freed dozens of political prisoners and begun modest reforms to revitalize the economy.

A five-decade U.S. trade embargo on the nation of 11 million people is still mostly intact, but Obama has authorized more cash remittances to the island.

Yeah, I now remember reading about that via DXLD back at the end of January.

Looka here, ilk.Supposin some day I buy a touch tablet, when the prices get down real low.Velocity Micro has them for not much over a hundred dollars.
http://www.velocitymicro.com

If I buy a whatever brand name touch tablet, as long as it will pick up a WiFi signal (maybe a WiFi only touch tablet?) Good enough,,, will it work OK from right here at doggy's couch? without me having to pay a monthly RIP OFF data fee, or whatever they call it? There is a tall cell tower just behind Metrocenter Mall, I reckon that tower is about 600 of my foot steps South of doggy's couch.It is about two tenths of a mile (or a little less) from doggy's couch, according to the odometer in my 1983 Dodge van.

I made comments on your personal stupidity comments and lack of technical know-how. You would assume you understand very basic electricity, somewhat, and that you should understand that a voltage is measured between two points. You know "difference of potential" and that complicated stuff, yeah?
Did you think your electricity or signal you receive goes in one ear and doesn't come out your other? Maybe it comes out your ass?

I attempted to get you thinking more than your usual small minded world

Put the receiver in a metal box, ground it, run the set on batteries inside the shielded box, to eliminate the signal return to the grid and then tell us about your radio silence and confess you didn't really understand the box with dials on it, you have been using, or radio signal propagation, in general.

How the fuck do guys like you get a licence?

The Origins of the Term "Privatization"

Michael Perelman on the origins of the term "privatization." I first met Michael many, many years ago as an undergraduate at CSU Chico where he was teaching:

The Nazi Heritage of Privatization, by Michael Perelman: Privatization is very popular among laissez-faire types today. The recent issue of the Journal of Economic Perspectives offers a ... tale in which the term privatization is falsely credited to Peter Drucker. In fact, Nazis coined the term. Their intent was to skew the distribution of income toward the rich, with the objective of reducing consumption.
After all, the rich have a lower marginal propensity to consume.

The term seems to have been first introduced into academic social science by Maxine Yaple Sweezy, wife of the distinguished Marxist economist, Paul Sweezy.

Bel, Germa'. 2006. ""The Coining of "Privatization" and Germany's National Socialist Party." Journal of Economic Perspectives, 20: 3 (Summer): pp. 187-94 [author web page link]: 187-8: "The standard story on the coining of "privatization" reports that in 1969 Peter Drucker used the term "reprivatization" in the sense that economists understand it today. In The Age of Discontinuity (1969, p. 229), Drucker makes a negative appraisal on the managerial capabilities of the public sector: "Government is a poor manager …. It has no choice but to be 'bureaucratic.'" Drucker's (p. 233) analysis of how government works leads him to what he takes as "the main lesson of the last fifty years: the government is not a doer." Thus, Drucker (p.
234) proposed adopting a "systematic policy of using the other, the nongovernmental institutions of the society of organizations, for the actual 'doing,' i.e., for performance, operations, execution. Such a policy might be called 'reprivatization.'" Drucker referred to "reprivatization" because he proposed giving back to the private sector executive responsibilities that had been private before the public sector took them over through nationalization and municipalization starting in the last decades of the nineteenth century."

189-90: "In the late 1930s and the early 1940s, a number of works were devoted to the analysis of economic policy in Germany under the rule of the National Socialist Party. One major work was Maxine Yaple Sweezy's (1941) The Structure of the Nazi Economy. Sweezy stated that industrialists supported Hitler's accession to power and his economic policies: "In return for business assistance, the Nazis hastened to give evidence of their good will by restoring to private capitalism a number of monopolies held or controlled by the state" (p. 27). This policy implied a large-scale program by which "the government transferred ownership to private hands" (p. 28). One of the main objectives for this policy was to stimulate the propensity to save, since a war economy required low levels of private consumption. High levels of savings were thought to depend on inequality of income, which would be increased by inequality of wealth. This, according to Sweezy (p. 28), "was thus secured by 'reprivatization' …. The practical significance of the transference of government enterprises into private hands was thus that the capitalist class continued to serve as a vessel for the accumulation of income. Profit-making and the return of property to private hands, moreover, have assisted the consolidation of Nazi party power." Sweezy (p. 30) again uses the concept when giving concrete examples of transference of government ownership to private hands: "The United Steel Trust is an outstanding example of 'reprivatization.'" This may be the first use of the term "reprivatization" in the academic literature in English, at least within the domain of the social sciences."

192-3: "The primary modern argument against privatization is that it only enriches and entrenches business and political elites, without benefiting consumers or taxpayers. The discussion here suggests a rich historical irony: these modern arguments against privatization are strikingly similar to the arguments made in favor of privatization in Germany in the 1930s. As Sweezy (1941) and Merlin (1943) explicitly point out, German privatization of the 1930s was intended to benefit the wealthiest sectors and enhance the economic position and political support of the elite. Of course, this historical connection does not prove that privatization is always a sound or an unsound policy, only that the effects of privatization may depend considerably on the political, social and economic contexts. German privatization in the 1930s differed from the privatization of Volkswagen in the 1950s, and both of these situations differ from, say, the British privatizations of the 1980s, the Russian privatizations of the 1990s, or the privatizations across Latin America over the last two decades."

Rick Scott's Medicaid Overhaul to Benefit…Rick Scott?

Rob Bixby/Flickr
Florida's governor is pushing a privatization plan that could be a major boon for health care companies. Like his.
— By Suzy Khimm
•

• Fri Mar. 25, 2011 12:01 AM PDT
• Republican governor Rick Scott's push to privatize Medicaid in Florida is highly controversial—not least because the health care business Scott handed over to his wife when he took office could reap a major profit if the legislation becomes law.
• Scott and Florida Republicans are currently trying to enact a sweeping Medicaid reform bill that would give HMOs and other private health care companies unprecedented control over the government health care program for the poor. Among the companies that stand to benefit from the bill is Solantic, a chain of urgent-care clinics aimed at providing emergency services to walk-in customers. The Florida governor founded Solantic in 2001, only a few years after he resigned as the CEO of hospital giant Columbia/HCA amid a massive Medicare fraud scandal. In January, he transferred his $62 million stake in Solantic to his wife, Ann Scott, a homemaker involved in various charitable organizations.
• Florida Democrats and independent legal experts say this handover hardly absolves Scott of a major conflict of interest. As part of a federally approved pilot program that began in 2005, certain Medicaid patients in Florida were allowed to start using their Medicaid dollars at private clinics like Solantic. The Medicaid bill that Scott is now pushing would expand the pilot privatization program to the entire state of Florida, offering Solantic a huge new business opportunity.
• "This is a conflict of interest that raises a serious ethical issue," says Marc Rodwin, a medical ethics professor at Suffolk University Law School in Boston. "The public should be thinking and worrying about this."
•
•
•
•
• With Scott's blessing, the Florida statehouse is currently hammering out the final details of the Medicaid bill, with a vote expected in the upcoming weeks. In the meantime, Scott has moved forward on another front that could also bring new business to Solantic. On Tuesday, he signed an executive order requiring random drug testing of many state employees and applicants for state jobs.

He's also urged state legislators to pass a similar bill that would require drug testing of poor Floridians applying for welfare.
• Among the services that Solantic offers: drug testing.
• "These changes to Medicaid are basically nothing but a business plan for Rick Scott's Solantic," says Florida Democratic Party spokesman Eric Jotkoff.
• Scott's office dismiss ethics questions over the governor's Solantic ties without further elaboration. "The claims of a conflict of interest are incorrect and baseless," Brian Hughes, Scott's deputy communications director, responds in an email. When pressed by local reporters, Scott also glosses over the issue. "I believe in the principle that if you have more competition it will drive down the prices," Scott told the St. Petersburg Times last week when asked about his wife's shares in Solantic. "If you give more choices, it's better for the consumer also to help drive down price…and that's exactly what I'm going to do as governor."
• Florida Democrats have blasted the governor over the controversy. "These changes to Medicaid are basically nothing but a business plan for Rick Scott's Solantic," says Eric Jotkoff, a spokesman for the Florida Democratic Party. "It's clear that he stands to greatly profit from these changes to Medicaid." The Democrats also point to Scott's past: Columbia/HCA was ultimately forced to pay the biggest Medicare fraud settlement in history, totaling $1.7 billion, though Scott denied knowledge of the fraud and escaped being personally penalized. More recently, Florida's Medicaid system has also been beset by fraud perpetrated by private health care officials. In January, five former executives of Wellcare, a managed care company, were indicted by a grand jury for running a scheme that stole Medicaid money designated for patients.
• Scott's current proposal aims to save the state $1 billion by drastically overhauling Medicaid, allowing private managed care companies to bid for contracts rather than paying traditional fee-for-services. The majority of Medicaid patients receive care through private companies and HMOs, but under Florida's bill such firms would end up having vast new authority over the program, with great leeway to limit access to services or reduce benefits. The bill would also put a hard cap on the amount of money that these managed care companies could spend on Medicaid, which advocates say could particularly harm disabled and elderly patients who require costlier long-term care.
• In the past, Florida's Medicaid pilot programs—which tested the waters for the proposals at the heart of the current bill—have been plagued by problems. According to a 2008 study by the Georgetown Center for Children and Families, participants experienced huge delays and restricted access to necessary treatments, says the center's co-executive director, Joan Alker. Patients found the new system bureaucratic and confusing—and HMOs were prone to dropping out without warning. Dr. Aaron Elkin, president of the Broward County Medical Association, recently declared the program to be a failure. And Medicaid patients don't have much better reviews. "It has taken four months to get a biopsy on a throat cancer due to the impediments placed by the HMOs for authorizations," one participant in the program told NPR.

• Scott and Florida Republicans are nevertheless plowing ahead, arguing that slashing costs is necessary due to the state's $3.6 billion budget deficit. Yet even if the bill passes the Florida statehouse, it will likely face another roadblock with the Obama administration, which must approve the biggest changes in the measure. Though the Bush administration happily green-lighted the pilot program in 2005, Obama officials are less likely to be amenable to continuing the troubled program—much less expanding it. The Obama administration, however, is holding off from commenting on the Florida bill until it receives the final version, though officials are "aware of some of the concerns" raised about the pilot programs, says Mary Kahn, a spokesperson for the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services.
• Casting himself as a free-market champion, Scott put his opposition to "Obamacare" at the heart of his campaign. But he could ultimately stand to gain from one of the federal government's biggest entitlements —a program that's also set to expand massively under the Affordable Care Act. Concludes Georgetown's Alker: "It's especially ironic when people who speak out against government involvement in health care turn around and profit from it."

• However, in the next sections I will document the word "privatization" in works published in the 1930s and early 1940s on German economic policy, and its recurrence in the 1950s and 1960s.
• One major work was Maxine Yaple Sweezy's (1941) The Structure of the Nazi Economy. Sweezy stated that industrialists supported Hitler's accession to power and his economic policies: "In return for business assistance, the Nazis hastened to give evidence of their good will by restoring to private capitalism a number of monopolies held or controlled by the state" (p. 27). This policy implied a large-scale program by which "the government transferred ownership to private hands" (p. 28). One of the main objectives for this policy was to stimulate the propensity to save, since a war economy required low levels of private consumption. High levels of savings were thought to depend on inequality of income, which would be increased by inequality of wealth. This, according to Sweezy (p. 28), "was thus secured by 'reprivatization'. . . . The practical significance of the transference of government enterprises into private hands was thus that the capitalist class continued to serve as a vessel for the accumulation of income. Profit-making and the return of property to private hands, moreover, have assisted the consolidation of Nazi party power."

It suppose it all goes back to 'country of origin', and the folks in Costa Rica may not want 'their' mail held up because of U.S. 'suspicions' of what may or not be in the mail from Cuba.

Hello,

I did something funny.

I made maps for all stations on a frequency, and also +/- 0.1 Mhz, and +/- 0.2 Mhz.

Green: the freq itself.
Dark red: +/- 0.1 Mhz Light red: +/- 0.2 Mhz

You can click on the icons te see details (location, height above see, Antenna height etc).

That makes a nice tool:
http://www.dxradio.byethost14.com/research/radio/fmmaps2/100.000/index.htm

Since I'm uploading now, only 100+ mhz is complete...

When America entered World War Two against Germany, our Military didn't have any real Good Maps of Germany.For Military use, Real Good Maps ARE Necessary! Really Real Good Detailed Maps.Our Military had to Hurry Up and make some Really Good Detailed Maps.

Germany, in some areas was still using Horses and Horses and Wagons.Their Side Arms, (Shootin Irons-Pistols) for a while, were a hodge podge of whatever they could round up.

Germany attacked Germany.A German prison near the Polish Border.Germany dressed some German prisoners in Polish Uniforms.The prisoners were injected with Skopedal, Skopedal made them go crazy and they attacked the German Prison.

Apparently, R. Verdad, Chiquimula, Guatemala is back to full power (700 watts, per their website and letters to G. Hauser). Ample evidence was also provided by their signal last night, which was the most potent I have ever hard it. Propagation on March 26 early AM UTC was amazing in many respects already, but their signal was pumping in here at S-8 with the preamps off, a first. Armchair for the first time.

And, a minor adjustment to their frequency, now 4055.00 kHz.

OMG, iBiquity has been selling stock?! It's just terrible when a company that's privately held and that is not traded on any stock exchange is selling stock.

Of course the reality of digital radio is very different than what our favorite troll writes about it.

There are two indicators of how digital radio is faring.

1. How well transmitters are selling and how many new digital transmitters are being introduced by equipment manufacturers.

Harris, Continental, and Nautel all have reported increased sales of digital radio transmission equipment.

2. How well receivers are selling and how many new digital receivers are being introduced by receiver manufacturers.

Receiver sales went way up in 2010, and in 2011 the rate of increase has increased even faster due to so many new vehicles being offered with digital radio as standard or optional equipment.

Understandably, the success of digital radio, especially in the U.S., but now spreading to other regions as well, greatly upsets those that have somehow become vested in hoping for the failure of digital radio.

Could be - but the sfi has not risen that much, and on days with the sfi as high as 150, it was never this good.

Moreover, the lower bands in general - 60/75/90 - were just so-so in propagation. Nobody else besides RV that I could tell had a significant improvement at my QTH. So, my vote goes to the restored transmitter in this instance.

Roger,

Build one of these : SWL "LTL-OG"* Antenna
* Long Thin Loop On-the-Ground

Portable SWL Antenna -so-it's-easy-to- Roll It Out & Roll It Up

Wire Antenna Element :
100 Feet of AWG 16/2 Low Voltage Landscape Cable
http://www.amazon.com/dp/B0002YTPJG

Matching Transformer :
Ready Made 4-to-1 Matching Transformer [MT]
http://www.amazon.com/dp/B001UEEVNC
-or- Make you own "MT" {More Work}

Coax Cable {Feed-in-LIne} :
RG-6/U Quad Shield Coaxial Cable 100 Feet

Everything Lays Directly On-the-Ground {Surface}
-so-it's-easy-to-:-roll-it-out-&-roll-it-up-

Assembly :
* At the MT Connect one-each of the Two {Twin Parallel} Landscape Cable Antenna Wires to one-each of the MT's
Two 300 Ohm Input Wires : Solder them.
* At the Far-End {other end} of the Landscape Cable Strip a Half-Inch of Insulation from both the Wires : Solder them.
Wrap these Soldered Bare Wires with Black Electrical Tape and secure the Tape with a Wire Tie.
* Connect the Coax Cable to the 75 Ohm "F" Connector of the MT.

Rigging the Antenna :
* Roll-Out the Coax Cable from your Radio/Receive out and away towards the general direction you want to receive from [N-E-S-W-] until you reach the MT.
* Continue to Roll-Out the Antenna Wire Element in the same general direction; until you reach it's Far-End.
* Streatch-Out {Tug-On} the Far-End of the Antenna Wire to make the Coax and Antenna lay straight, flat, and long.
* Go back to the MT and Place your Ground Stake -if- you are using a Ground Stake. -or- Roll-Out the two Counterpoise Wires at 90* {Right-Arm} and 270* {Left-Arm} from the Lay
of the Coax 180* {Foot} & Antenna 0* {Head}

Note 1 : Safety Ground
A short 24" Metal Ground Stack can be used at the point where the MT and Coax meet. Use a Metal Hose Clamp to Secure the MT & Coax "F" Connector 'Joint' to the Ground Stack. The 24" Metal Ground Stack can be make of R-Bar that is Shaped like and "L" 18"Vx6"H this allows the Hose Clamp to be positioned on the "H" Horizontal Top and keeps the Coax-to-MT-to-Antenna Joint 'Flat' and close to the ground.
-Tip- Bring a Gallon Jug of Salted Water {One Ounce NaCl} to pour 6" around the Ground Stake.

Note 2 : RF Counterpoise can be used at the point where the MT and Coax meet. Use a 50 Foot Length of #14 AWG Bare Copper Wire and use a Metal Hose Clamp to Secure the MT & Coax "F" Connector 'Joint' to the Center-Point of Counterpoise Wire.
http://www.amazon.com/dp/B0000223YM
Rigging {Laying-Out} the two Counterpoise Wires from the MT -by- Rolling-Out the two Counterpoise Wires at 90*
{Right-Arm} and 270* {Left-Arm} from the Lay of the Coax 180* {Foot} & Antenna 0* {Head}
-also- Stretch-Out {Tug-On} the Far-Ends of the Counterpoise Wires
-IIRC- the RF Counterpoise Arms makes this Antenna more directional off-the-far-end - nitt?

-Tip- At the Center of the Counterpoise Wire Fold the Wire back-over for about 2" and Twist the 3-Overlaying Wires together for more electrical contact-area and a stronger mechanical-joint where the Wire is Held by the Hose Clamp; plus this also gives the Wire some strain-relief at the Joint.
are using a Ground Stake. -or- Roll-Out the two Counterpoise Wires at 90* {Right-Arm} and 270* {Left-Arm} from the Lay
of the Coax 180* {Foot} & Antenna 0* {Head}

Note 3 : Some SWL'ers use both the Safety Ground Stake and the RF Counterpoise together

Alternative SWL "LTL-LOF"* Antenna {fixed location}
* Long Thin Loop Low-On-Fence
Mount the Antenna and Feed-in-Line 'Low' on the Side of a Wooden Fence about One Foot above Ground Level.
Here use a Ground Rod/Wire at the point where the MT and Coax meet. Use a Metal Hose Clamp to Secure the MT & Coax "F" Connector 'Joint' to the Ground Rod/Wire.

Sizing the SWL "LTL-OG"* Antenna
* Long Thin Loop On-the-Ground
What is described here is a 'Standard' 100 Foot Long Antenna Element coupled to a 100 Foot Long Coax Cable via a Matching Transformer : Making the Total Length -s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d-o-u-t- On-the-Ground 200 Feet.
+ Plus Two 25 Foot Counterpoises : Total 50 Feet

'Smaller' Half-Size would be 50 Foot Long Antenna Element coupled to a 50 Foot Long Coax Cable via a Matching Transformer : Making the Total Length
-s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d-o-u-t- On-the-Ground 100 Feet.
+ Plus Two 12.5 Foot Counterpoises : Total 25 Feet

'Larger' Double-Size would be 200 Foot Long Antenna Element coupled to a 200 Foot Long Coax Cable via
a Matching Transformer : Making the Total Length
-s-t-r-e-t-c-h-e-d-o-u-t- On-the-Ground 400 Feet.
+ Plus Two 50 Foot Counterpoises : Total 100 Feet

FWIW : This is a very 'quiet' Antenna so you most likely will have to use the Receiver's built in Pre-Amp to hear the very low signals come from it.

Here is a truely prescient book.

Seventy years before the Berlin Wall, "Pictures of the Socialistic Future" was written by Eugen Richter in 1893!

"Prophetic is not quite the word for this book. Richter saw with chilling clarity what would happen under socialistic control. The economy would be smashed. Families would be destroyed. The population would grow poorer by the day. The state would be unleashed to crush political dissent and lock everyone into a national prison. None of the ideals would be achieved."

I'm all for digital radio. But IBOC and digital radio are not synonymous.

In fact, IBOC itself is a very bad thing for the future of digital radio. It's as if, in 1911, the only automobiles allowed on the road had been steam engines retrofitted onto horse-drawn buggies -- with the horses still pulling them... and with anyone who questioned that arrangement being derided as "against motorcars."

With every good wish,

"Just as the Left was drawn to the communist killing machines of Lenin, Stalin, Mao, Pol Pot, and Castro, so too it is now attracted to radical Islam."

"The contempt that German Hitlerytes had for "Bolshevism" or "marxist Jews" generally should also not mislead us in assessing the similarity between National Socialism and Communism. Leftist sects are very prone to rivalry, dissension, schism and hatred of one-another. One has only to think of the Bolsheviks versus the Mensheviks, Stalin versus Trotsky, China versus the Soviet Union etc. Similarity does not preclude rivalry. Hitler and Stalin were literally brothers in arms BEFORE they became rivals. That socialist brothers sometimes fall out should not prevent us from noting the brotherhood concerned."

"The fundamental dogma of all brands of socialism and communism is that the market economy or capitalism is a system that hurts the vital interests of the immense majority of people for the sole benefit of a small minority of rugged individualists. It condemns the masses to progressing impoverishment. It brings about misery, slavery, oppression, degradation and exploitation of the working men, while it enriches a class of idle and useless parasites."

"This doctrine was not the work of Karl Marx. It had been developed long before Marx entered the scene. Its most successful propagators were not the Marxian authors, but such men as Carlyle and Ruskin, the British Fabians, the German professors and the American Institutionalists. And it is a very significant fact that the correctness of this dogma was contested only by a few economists who were very soon silenced and barred from access to the universities, the press, the leadership of political parties and, first of all, public office. Public opinion by and large accepted the condemnation of capitalism without any reservation."

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - http://mises.org/midroad.asp

"The term 'planning' is mostly used as a synonym for socialism, communism, and authoritarian and totalitarian economic management. Sometimes only the German pattern of socialism-Zwangswirtschaft-is called planning, while the term socialism proper is reserved for the Russian pattern of outright socialization and bureaucratic operation of all plants, shops, and farms. At any rate, planning in this sense means all-around planning by the government and enforcement of these plans by the police power. Planning in this sense means full government control of business. It is the antithesis of free enterprise, private initiative, private ownership of the means of production, market economy, and the price system. Planning and capitalism are utterly incompatible. Within a system of planning production is conducted according to the government's orders, not according to the plans of capitalists and entrepreneurs eager to profit by best filling the wants of the consumers.

"But the term planning is also used in a second sense. Lord Keynes, Sir William Beveridge, Professor Hansen, and many other eminent men assert that they do not want to substitute totalitarian slavery for freedom. They declare that they are planing for a free society. They recommend a third system, which, as they say, is as far from socialism as it is from capitalism, which, as a third solution of the problem of society's economic organization, stands midway between the two other systems, and while retaining the advantages of both, avoids the disadvantages inherent in each.

"These self-styled progressives are certainly mistaken when they pretend that their proposals are new and unheard of. The idea of this third solution is very old indeed, and the French have long since baptized it with a pertinent name; they call it interventionism. Hardly anybody can doubt that history will link the idea of social security, more closely than with the American New Deal and with Sir William Beveridge, with the memory of Bismarck whom our fathers did not precisely describe as a liberal. All the essential ideas of present-day interventionist progressivism were neatly expounded by the supreme brain-trusters of imperial Germany, Professors Schmoller and Wagner, who at the same time urged their Kaiser to invade and to conquer the Americas. Far be it from me to condemn any idea only on account of its not being new. But as the progressives slander all their opponents as old-fashioned, orthodox, and reactionary, it is expedient to observe that it would be more appropriate to speak of the clash of two orthodoxies; the Bismarck orthodoxy versus the Jefferson orthodoxy.

Dr. Ludwig von Mises - 1952 - http://mises.org/books/planningforfreedom_mises.pdf

The origins of the modern left can be traced back to the famous passage in Rousseau’s Discourse on the Origin and Foundations of Inequality, in which he condemned the institution of private property:

“The first man, who after enclosing a piece of ground, took it into his head to say, ‘this is mine,’ and found people simple enough to believe him, was the real founder of civil society.”

Added Rousseau: “How many crimes, how many wars, how many murders, how many misfortunes and horrors, would that man have saved the human species, who pulling up the stakes or filling up the ditches should have cried to his fellows: Beware of listening to this impostor; you are lost, if you forget that the fruits of the earth belong equally to us all, and the earth itself to nobody!"

Around the 1830s, a faction of French liberals gravitated toward Romanticism and the philosophy of the late Rousseau, proclaiming that capitalism, private property, and the increasing complexity of modern society were agents of moral decay -- both for the individual and for society at large. This is essentially the worldview that has made its way, through history, into the collective mind of the modern left; it is a worldview calling for a revolution that not only will topple the existing capitalist order and punish its corrupt leaders, but that also will replace that order with a socialist regime where the utopian ideals of perfect justice and equality will reign. Such an ambition can be put into effect only by a totalitarian state with the authority to micromanage every facet of human life, precisely the end-point toward which the policies and crusades of the modern left are directed.

When the term "liberalism" (from the Latin word liberalis, meaning "pertaining to a free man") first emerged in the early 1800s, its hallmarks were a belief in individual rights, the rule of law, limited government, private property, and laissez faire economics. These would remain the defining characteristics of liberalism throughout the liberal epoch (generally identified as the period of 1815-1914). Yet the modern left, which portrays itself as the agent of enlightened commitment to "liberal" causes, in fact stands for the antithesis of each of the foregoing liberal ideals. Contrary to its self-definition, the left is neither "liberal" nor "progressive," but rather a reactionary force that seeks to resurrect the traditions that characterized the epoch which preceded the rise of classical liberalism.

The following is from The World Book Encyclopedia, 1947 edition:
The chief characteristics of Fascism are as follows:

THE CULTIVATION OF IGNORANCE

Fascism, like all forms of government, rests firmly on the sincere consent of a large part of the population... To maintain this consent, the Fascist leadership must cut off the people from any information which might cause them to doubt the complete correctness of the fixed Fascist principles... All forms of communication are carefully censored, so that the public will receive only those facts that the dictators want known... Travel to other countries must be controlled, and freedom of speech and assembly must be rigorously suppressed...

These people saw in Fascism a protection against the demands of farmers and other workers... Both regimes at first upheld the rights of private property... They subjected the working classes to a rigorous discipline... As soon as they were firmly established, the dictators began to limit profit, impose capital levies, and regulate business in great detail...

THE POLICE STATE

Fascism depends upon the police to crush all opposition or dissent. Secret police spy on the whole population, and any casual remark against the regime leads to swift and severe punishment... Opposition parties are dissolved. Intellectual, athletic and recreational organizations are usually brought under the control of the Fascist authority... The ruthlessness of the police gradually becomes less noticeable... This is because within a year or so after a Fascist government takes power, vigorous opponents of the regime have either left the country, been killed or jailed...

Every absolute government has used the police state to some degree...
It was highly developed among the ancient Assyrians...)

.....sound..familiar?.....

EXTREME NATIONALISM

Fascism is highly nationalistic... It tries to identify its principles with the country, so that disagreement will look like treason... Some other country, or some group within the country, is chosen to serve as the "enemy" and made to appear as the cause of all evils or misfortunes... For example, the Nazis in Germany represented their movement first as a crusade against the Jews, then as a fight against Communism and later as a struggle against the "attacks" from whatever neighboring country they wished to subdue or occupy... Extreme nationalism often becomes a kind of racial fanaticism... Sometimes it combines racial and religious bigotry...

When you hear the Liberal Fascist JackAss propaganda that THEY are the true patriots then you know the time is near. Look for it from the socialist Labor Unions such as the SEIU!
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6535

MILITARISM

Fascism maintains among the people a permanently warlike frame of mind... Every citizen feels that he is mobilized against enemies of the regime from within, and against possible foreign foes... The dictator usually comes to power during a period of economic crisis or depression... He relieves the depression partly by employing many people in the making of armaments... To justify this procedure, he must convince the people that the country is threatened, and must point toward some of the enemies against whom the armaments may be needed...

Here are the Three (3) Phases of Liberal Decay into Fascism:

1. Liberalism (Well Meaning, Nice Sounding, "Do-Gooder" Policies Always Doomed to Fail)

More Draconian Liberal Polices are Implemented to Transform The People into a New Society that

3. Liberal-Fascism (The Rise of the Party Leader over 'The Party' Ensuring the Unity and Uniformaty of 'The Party' and Enforcing The Will of 'The Party' Over the People.) The Party Leader will Cleanse 'The Party' of All those Who Are NOT of 'The Party'; and 'The Party' Will Cleanse the People of All Those Who Do NOT Support 'The Party' and The Party Leader. The waivers are not exemptions. They mostly allow continuation of existing health plans.

HUMmmm There Y@J.N Yourself !

Actually the so-called Lower 1/3rd Wage Earners often Get Back More Than They Pay {Yes the USA has a Negative Income}

=HINT= Earned Income Tax Credit is a Negative Income Tax For Many {Not All} Working Families With Children
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Earned_Income_Tax_Credit

More Accurate the Bottom 20% do not even File IRS Tax Forms and with their Deductions : Pay NO Withholding Taxes -but- If they did File most would get a few More Dollars Back -that's-a- Negative Income Tax !

=HINT= Negative Income Tax = Earned Income Tax Credit
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Negative_income_tax

Then the Next to the Bottom 20% Do File IRS Tax Forms
-because- They Do Pay Some Payroll Withholding Taxes and Want Their Money Back : This 2nd 20% Promptly Fill Their Taxes and usually Receive More Money Back Then They Paid in Income Tax Withholdings.
-that's-a- Negative Income Tax !

Actually -- the very early self-propelled wagons were powered by steam . Seriously . Some later designs included quite a number of Alert! On 27 March 2011 from 0324 UTC tune-in to 0347 off the air abruptly, I just listened to a Spanish-speaking station playing what sounded like South American Music on 9905 kHz. Pretty fair signal, not 100% copy but enough to get the major gist of it. No ID heard. Audio Recording made. Eibi shows no such station for this frequency. Aoki currently shows a single station:

9905 R. Dif. America 0000-2400 1234567 Spanish/Guarani 0.2 ND
Asuncion-Villeta PRG 05733W2531S Ameri 25 31
57 33

The Latin American Shortwave Logs archive (linked above by Steve) shows THIS station:

9905 PRG R Colégio Técnico, Villeta Jun04 C 5 WATTS
(skdMar04 1000-2000) (r)AM1610/FM1079 ex-R America

...apparently from 2004. The listings suggest that the station Aoki shows as current is an ex-station as of 2004.

Does anyone at all have any more information on this station? This is rather exciting for me...believing that I might never hear a Paraguayan station at all, and having this show up. Even more amazing is that it might be 200 watts non-directional (5 watts sounds ridiculous...)

Thanks in advance ~

The Paraguayan station is in a 'former/inactive' list . The low power (5 Watts) must have been an experimental/local station from a Technical School in Villeta .  P.S. If not mistaking-- Dr. Mengele used to live there , once upon a time . . .

Just don't open their crap. I think there are a few people who post here all the time that don't have a SW-radio.

I have my Drake setup beside my great chair under the ceiling fan in the labary area and I DX, sleep, dx, sleep, sleep and maybe DX. I have worked hard to follow the ChrishchURch and Japan stuff on the radios everyday.

The car is half of an asymmetric dipole. If you pursue that line of thinking you'll find plenty of info. I'd model it as a ground plane with drooping radials.

"Robert Struble Channels Lee DeForest"

"iBiquity's President and CEO, Robert Struble, has taken to tweeting.
In early September, he revealed he'd taken the train to Wall Street to float the notion of taking iBiquity public: 'Good NYC trip. Wall St way more upbeat than recently. IPO pipeline better, but most think [stock market] rally was too fast'... In the early 20th century, Lee DeForest, inventor of the audion tube spent a portion of his early career engaged with unscrupulous businessmen in the practice of 'pumping and dumping' stock in radio companies featuring his invention... One might say the same about Bob Struble and iBiquity.
Given the wobbly future of the HD Radio protocol, it is not far-fetched to see a historical parallel between Struble and DeForest."

IB. Solar Activity Forecast: Solar activity is expected to be low for the next three days (27 - 29 March). A chance for M-class activity exists on day one (27 March) becoming likely on days two and three (28 - 29 March) with a slight chance for X-class activity on 29 March. This expected increase in activity is due to the complex nature of Region 1176 and the return of old Region 1166 (N10, L=110) on 27 March. On its last transit across the disk, old Region 1166 produced four M-class events and one X-class event.

Cuhulin,

If you can not get the Potassium Iodide Pills :

Then the simplest and easy to get locally is the Morton Lite Salt Mixture : 1-Teaspoon Daily =
* Salt Sodium Chloride 48% + Potassium Chloride 40% + Iodide 160%
http://www.walmart.com/ip/Morton-Lite-Mixture-Salt-11-oz/10318920

One 11 Ounce Container has ~55 One-Teaspoon Severing = 55 Days of Iodide/Iodine Dosing
-or- ~14 Days @ Four (4) Teaspoons a Day for a Multi-Dose of 640% for Radioactive Iodine Absorption Prevention

The Question Becomes :
? Can You Deal With The Side-Effects of Four (4)
Teaspoons a Day for 14 Days of Lite-Salt !
{or Potassium Iodide "KI" Pills}
http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Potassium_iodide
-or- ? Do You Want To Live The Rest of Your Life
With The More Dangerous Effects of Radioactive Iodine Absorption {Radioactive Poisoning} !

Caution : Children's young growing bodies are the most effected by Radioactive Iodine.

FYI : Pets Need Potassium Iodide Too
-if- There is a Radiation Poisoning Event

Note : One 11 Oz Container per Person

In a letter the school board members Saturday, Deasy said he wants to continue earning his $275,000 salary when he takes over from Superintendent Ramon Cortines on April 15.

Cortines makes $250,000 a year.

"Given our fiscal situation, I simply cannot at this time take the salary offered," Deasy wrote to the school board.

Deasy signed a $330,000-a-year contract in December to lead the nation's second-largest school district. He said he would accept that larger salary once financial conditions improve at the district. Deasy's contract does not include a buyout clause, but it does include full benefits and retirement packages.

LAUSD faces a $408 million deficit in the 2011-12 school year and could have to lay off up to 5,200 teachers to close the gap.

Some labor unions had criticized Deasy for taking a salary so much higher than Cortines, especially in these challenging times for school districts.

On Saturday, union leaders were happy with Deasy's announcement.

"Bravo John," said United Teachers Los Angeles President A.J. Duffy. "You did the right thing."

Until IBM entered the market it was considered a hobby for geeks.
I bought an Altair 8800. A friend already had a Mark1 but he never put it in a box. I got a TRS-80 then TRS-80 Mod4. CP/M was catching on. Unix was going nowhere. IBM tried to buy CP/M but Gary Kendal would have none of it. Microsoft said they could get it for IBM but couldn't so they told a Seattle guy that Q-DOS was only worth $5000 even though they had already sold it to IBM for $500,000.
I quite subscribing to Computer World when the declaired the microcoputer was finally a reality because IBM entered the market. Computer World stopped reporting on hobby computing and focused on DOS machines.

It wasn't until Byte decared that Clintons tax increase was going to kill the economy that I dropped Byte. Corporate media favors corporations because they pay the advertising dollars where hobbyists do not.

There was a suggestion somewhere on the Internet (cannot remember where) that there might be a change of mind. Anyone know?

How much money is the BBC actually saving? It seems to me a fairly poor sense of priority to withdraw the World Service from a large chuck of Europe when we are as a nation presumably trying to make friends, influence people and promote British values.

Or is the argument that if the BBC is to be funded by the licence payer only the (UK) licence payer really counts.

Having said all that I see a lot of AM stations are closing so is it genuinely the case that very few people listen on AM radio with enthusiasts now using the Internet? Obviously that would help people in cars though.

Any ideas what will happen to 648 KHz? I have seen the speculation.

Yes, it was a late comer, indeed . But , no other private enterprise had had the resources or desire (on such a scale) to bet on a relatively new market . And this was in the days when mainframes were still ruling the world . . .

Our Heavenly Father says,
"Though My Words you have heard many times, I repeat Them to remind all of mankind I am always where you are, because in this Creation of human life, a Gift of Divine Love Greater than it is seen to be, is to one day return to Me a Portion of It, the Soul that you walked with daily."

REVELATION DELIVERED THROUGH FRANCES M. KLUG
ON MAY 12,2005 AT 11:55 A.M.

OUR HEAVENLY FATHER

"I am your Heavenly Father.

My Name is known throughout the world. I insisted this to be for all of human beings to understand I am everywhere at all times. I am available to everything you think, say and do. Remember this.

So many children are not being instructed regarding My Presence, My Love for them. It is a sadness to Me, because I created them so that one day their Soul that they lived with in the human way would be returned to Me after serving Me in a human way, a human being. The Soul I would accept, because of My Love for the service the Soul will have experienced, could have practiced, and would have adjusted to, helping someone know right from wrong, good from evil, purity from impurity, justice from injustice.

Though My Words you have heard many times, I repeat Them to remind all of mankind I am always where you are, because in this Creation of human life, a Gift of Divine Love Greater than it is seen to be, is to one day return to Me a Portion of It, the Soul that you walked with daily.

I could speak hours on end, because there is so much for Me to discuss, to instruct how much I care about human beings created with the abilities, the talents, the understanding, and the Goal that they have.

As I close I say, 'Do not forget your prayers; I wait for them every day.'"

The man is a great orator and speaks many truths. Very commendable. I would really enjoy attending one of his speeches.

From his speech::

"Obama is the first Jewish President" "He was selected before he was elected. And the people that selected him were rich, powerful members of the Jewish community."

"The American people are dying, and the Food and Drug Administration is complicit," he said. "Greed is more important than the lives of the American people."

"He talked about the importance of strong family units, conservative outfits for women, healthy food and land ownership... interracial births pose a threat to the white population and that Jews control the mainstream civil rights movement...

Criticized President Barack Obama for joining up with the "old colonial masters" of the Western-led forces and expressed skepticism about European countries espousing humanitarian concerns, saying they "give noble motives to their wickedness."

"Do you think they had humanitarian concerns when the British mowed down the Indians in India who were peacefully protesting?" he said. "Where in the hell is humanitarian values in America when you've got over 50 million Americans living in poverty, sick and diseased, with no healthcare?"

Is Jackson State University located in downtown Jackson?

Before anyone ever heard of the great Walter Payton I watched him score six touchdowns in one game against the University of Nebraska-Omaha when he played for Jackson State. Everyone in the crowd was genuinely awe struck. I knew he was destined for NFL greatness that day. His brother Eddie also played on the team and would later play in the NFL as well.

Walter also kicked all the extra points and field goals for the team.. An amazing talent and a truly nice man (unlike the arrogant jocks of today). Very intelligent also, he graduated with a bachelor's degree in Communications at the age of 20. Why do the good die so young? The world is a poorer place without "Sweetness" in it.

Psyops, directed to Libyan ships on 10405u, heard here at 0910 under heavy QRM/jamming? In English and presumed Arabic.

The short English message asks Libyan naval officers to leave their ships and to their families.

The transmission is apparently broadcast from an aircraft in the area.

5106. OT: Cairo, New York (Eat the rich)

According to the Department of Economics at the University of Berkley, California, New York State rebates 15 billion dollars annually in stock transfer taxes to Wall Street. This potential revenue to the state is lost in the hands of the richest one percent of New York's population, whose income share is currently 44 percent of total New York State income.

Additionally, Cuomo and Senate majority leader Dean Skelos proposed a termination of the Millionaires' Tax that brings in 1.5 billion dollars, and refused to reinstate the 50% tax on bankers' bonuses, which would bring in 10 billion dollars in state revenue.

Small wonder, then, that the bulk of some 4,000 banners and placards read "Tax the Rich", a spectacle that drew scores of police barricades and state security personnel to the scene. As the enormous line of bodies moved through the streets, workers from nearby offices ï¿½ some in suits, others in janitors' uniforms ï¿½ ran outside to join the protestors.

I reckon you never saw what Hurricane Katrina did to the Gulf Coast, and not only in Missy Sippy either.Look on a Map how far North doggy's couch is from the Gulf Coast.Katrina ripped ten shingles off of the top of my house and blew down three trees across the street I live on.My electric power came back on about 18 hours later.Many other people's electric power in Jackson and in Missy Sippy and in some other States was out for weeks, months.

My Hero Dr.Ben Marble in Gulfport told Shotgun Cheney 'What to Do!' not only once, but twice.Those Brit Top Gear Queers expected N'Awlins to have been completly rebuilt 2 years and 7 months after Katrina.

Those little areas of Highway 1/Big Sur amount to Nothing compared to what Hurricane Katrina and Hurricane Camile did.

That was the 50's. During the Reagan years, Republicans got it into their tiny little heads that they were the only real Americans. This was a sort of retroactive rationalization of Nixon's behavior (they had been trying to rationalize it all along) which implied that pretty much anything they wanted to do was justified in advance, since everyone "not them" hated America and wanted to destroy it. And they have been pretty much basing their existence on that belief ever since. Ever since Reagan, Republicans have been in love with expanding government power while paying nothing more than lip service to the constitutional principle of limiting it. Listen to right wing talk radio or read a right wing magazine. Does Ann Coulter believe we're all Americans at the end of the day? Fuck no, she doesn't. The Republicans decided that they were perfect and it was the rest of the world that was fucked up and their policies, their beliefs, their swaggering around, their hatred of the media, their contempt for laws and lately their indifference to their own nation and constituents have reflected it ever since.

 Although they still talk about "limiting government," the only aspects of government that they have shown any interest in limiting are those parts that help non-millionaires, protect consumers or keep strip mining operations out of national parks.

Rich people don't pay the top rate on all of their income. They only pay the top rate on income above a threshold.

Ostentatious wealth is tacky and Unamerican (except maybe in North Texas). The richest man in America drives a Cutlass.

Hayley Barbour is not racist.It is Expected that some people out there do not want him to be President of U.S.A. Especially those democrats and liberals.

Next month he will announce whether or not he will Campaign to be President of U.S.A.
So I saw and heard on local TV news a few days ago.

I Hope he gets Caterpillar to move from High Taxes Illinois to Missy Sippy.He is very busy nowadays, but he just might be talking to Caterpillar too.

PACCAR (Home based in Washington State, I think so) has a new Diesel Engines Factory (Kenworth and Peterbuilt and DAF Trucks) in Columbus,Mississippi.

Caterpillar, Cat on down to Mississippi.South is Always Best.

In the late 1990s, I began probing how Americans define the dream. I discovered in 1999 that about one-third believed the American Dream meant some form of financial success: the acquisition of goods, a bigger house, a home with a piece of land around it and so on. I called them the Traditional Materialists.

But I found an equal-size group that eschewed both that label and that aspiration. I called this group the Secular Spiritualists, finding they had decided to reorder their priorities away from things and rejected the notion that he who dies with the most toys wins.

Instead, for Secular Spiritualists, life was about being genuine, about achieving a legacy larger than one's self, about leaving this earth a better place for family, community, and planet.

A uniform national sales tax is regressive. It hits poor people where they can't afford to be hit and makes no difference to the wealthy at all.

- Rich people don't pay the top rate on all of their income.
- They only pay the top rate on income above a threshold.

Dave : Do-The-Math !

High Income Earners that are Over $379,150 AGI
-source- IRS 2011 Tax Table for 'Single'

Pay $110,016.50 in Taxes for that $379,150 AGI
{Which Equals ~29% of that Income}

Plus 35% of the Excess Over $379,150 AGI
{Which Equals ~35% of that Income}
* Roughly a $132,703 for the Next [2nd] $379,150 AGI which is about $22,700 in Additional Taxes.

For a Millionaire with an AGI of $1,000,000 the Amount of Taxes Paid above $379K would be :
$1M - $379K = $621K AGI @ 35% = $217,350
in Additional Taxes.

For a Multi-Millionaire with an AGI of $5,000,000
the Amount of Taxes Paid above $379K would be :
$5M - $379K = $4.621M AGI @ 35% = $1.617M
in Additional Taxes.
I would rather Collect the Last $1,617M in Taxes
then the first $110K

I have always thought that for for those who fall into the Range of Ten-Times [10X] the Highest Tax Bracket Threshold ~$3,791,500 the Amount below $379,150 should be Tax Free and the Amount Above $379,150 would be Taxed at the 35% Rate Coupled With NO Deductions and NO Credits and NO Exemptions : This Equates To A Flat and Uniform Fixed Standard Deduction for All Those Making Ten-Times [10X] the Highest

Tax Bracket Threshold ~$3,791,500
* Easier and More Accurate Actual Income Reporting
* Less Paper Work and Accounting For The Tax Payer and The IRS
* Less Gaming The Tax System by the Tax Payer
* Less Creative Accounting by the Tax Payer
* Better Tax Accountability for the IRS
* Greater Overall Tax Revenue for the IRS

How Lavish and Excessive a Rich Person Lives is Their Own Concern and Not the IRS Business; and Not Deductible [.] Beyond the Normal and Customary {Reasonable} Expenses* of the Average Working Man should not be allowed.

* Wouldn't You or any Average Working Man Like a $110K a Year Tax-Free to Life-On each Year ?
-and-if- You Wanted to Spend More You Could
-but- It Would First Be Fully Taxed !

I don't collect. I sell radios to get money to buy new radios. I have a ham HF transceiver, a communications receiver for my 30m autospotter, a National NC-125 tube radio in case of EMP, an AOR AR8200MK3B for work, a Kenwood 2m mobile in the wagon, and a handheld Yaesu 6m 2m 70cm 1.296mHz

In web matters, it's often less a case of selective ignorance, and more a case of protecting one's privacy. A lot of such sites invest heavily in tracking systems to harvest what they may from a user's browser, and in the case of some news sites, interrogate a user's harddrive.

AOL has been busted for this more than once, over the years.

Salon magazine covers a variety of topics. It has reviews and articles about music, books, and films. It also has articles about "modern life", including relationships, friendships and human sexual behavior. It covers technology, with a particular focus on the free software/open source movement.

Salon has always been an interactive site to some degree. The "salon" concept is played out in two discussion board communities open exclusively to online subscribers, Salon Table Talk and The WELL, and since 2005, comments on editorial stories open to all readers.

In 2008, Salon launched its biggest interactive initiative, Open Salon, a social content site/blog network for its readers.

Responding to the question "how far do you go with the tabloid sensibility to get readers?", former Salon.com editor-in-chief David Talbot said:

Is Salon more tabloid-like? Yeah, we've made no secret of that. I've said all along that our formula here is that we're a smart tabloid. If by tabloid what you mean is you're trying to reach a popular audience, trying to write topics that are viscerally important to a readership, whether it's the story about the mother in Houston who drowned her five children or the story on the missing intern in Washington, Chandra Levy.[2]

TAXES : 'Facts' -are- "Facts" :
http://www.taxfoundation.org/files/federalindividualratehistory-20080107.pdf

From 1965 to 1981 the Maximum US Federal Income
Tax Rate was 70% and the Rich were still Very Rich
After Taxes !

From 1982 to 1986 the Maximum US Federal Income
Tax Rate was 50% and the Rich were still Very Rich
After Taxes !

From 1993 to 2002 the Maximum US Federal Income
Tax Rate was ~39% and the Rich were still Very Rich

After Taxes !

Since 2003 to Present the Maximum US Federal Income Tax Rate was ~35% and the Rich were still Very Rich
After Taxes !

Basic Top 10% Pays 90% Tax Scheme : With the Remaining 90% Pays 10% Via a Flat Sales Tax

Fix a Percentage {What Every That Percentage Is XX%]
That Has The Rich [Top 10%] Pay and AGI Income/Wealth
Tax {How Much Did You Make = Send US XX%}

Fix a Percentage {What Every That Percentage Is YY%]
That Has The Rest [Lower 90%] Pay a Flat Sales Tax and Not have to Worry about Taxes and Ppaper-Work.
Tax {How Much Did You Spend/Consume = Simply Pay
It As You Go}

Ideally the Two Percentages Income XX% and Sales YY% would be about Four-to-One : So That Tax Payers Whether Income or Sales would Both Be Paying an Equal and Fair-Share of Disposable {Excess} Income beyond the Cost of Keeping Self and Average Family Housed, Fed and Healthy.
Four-to-One [4-to-1] Rate Examples :
Low National Sales Flat Tax of 6% : Would result-in an National Income Tax Flat Rate of 24% Moderate National Sales Flat Tax of 9% : Would result-in an National Income Tax Flat Rate of 36% High National Sales Flat Tax of 12% : Would result-in an National Income Tax Flat Rate of 48%
INDEX : The Rich/Wealthy Highest 10% Income Threashold to Five-Times [5X] The Average US Household/Family Income a/o Fifteen Times [15X] The US Poverty Level for a Household/Family : Annual Recalculation to Adjust for Inflation etc.
-example-
Average Married Family of Four ~$75K * 5X = $375K
-example-
Poverty Level Single + Two Children ~$22K * 15X = $330K

An Encounter To Stop A Subcontinent
It may be only a cricket match, but try telling the millions who'll watch India v Pakistan in the World Cup semi-final that Peter Roebuck
March 30, 2011

Matches: India v Pakistan at Mohali Series/Tournaments: ICC Cricket World Cup
Teams: India | Pakistan
A cricket match can hold only so much weight. In that regard the forthcoming semi-final, a local derby as well, and a tussle between sometimes agitated old rivals, is bursting at the seams. In Chandigarh on the eve of the match, I came across someone offering US$1500 for a ticket, whilst a favoured tuk-tuk driver was urgently but forlornly seeking four for his family. Reporters have been instructed to arrive four hours before the first ball - happily it is not a morning start - and the local airport has been forced to find room for 50 private planes.

Interest is at fever pitch across the region. India's parliament is shutting up shop at 2.30 pm. A large screen has been erected in the halls of debate. Mumbai's taxi drivers are taking the day off. Companies are asking their employers to arrive at 7am, promising to stop work in time for the first ball. They, too, have put up screens in offices and on factory floors. Otherwise no one would turn up for work. The Melbourne Cup might stop a nation. India versus Pakistan in the World Cup stops a subcontinent.

It is a truth often repeated that locals follow not cricket but cricketers. At times that can seem to be the case, but on other occasions it seems unjust, even a little patronising. After all tens of thousands of supporters attended matches played between other nations, and along the way showed every sign of appreciating good cricket. And the same applies in Bangladesh and Sri Lanka. Keeping ticket prices low gave the common man and humble cricket lover an opportunity to watch the game. And he took it.

Now people are paying small fortunes to watch this clash of the neighbours, also described as a confrontation of the titans. Doubtless they are going to watch Sachin Tendulkar and Yuvraj Singh, the reviving local champion. Doubtless they are keen to view the showdown. Is it possible, though, that the supporters might also be capable of appreciating the game itself?

As this World Cup has reminded all and sundry once again, cricket can count itself fortunate that it took hold in this region. Certainly trouble comes along with the location, but it is well worth the bother. Vast populations whose interest in the game shows no sign of waning, a rapidly rising middle class, and immense ability have been on display in this tournament. Three of the semi-finalists are from the area and they include the powerful, the impassioned and the original.

As far as the semi-final is concerned it has been cast as a battle between India's batting and Pakistan's bowling, and played before a baying crowd, the match ought to be memorable. Having outstared doom against Australia, the Indians may conclude their time has come. Advised by a government minister to avoid match-fixing, the Pakistanis may feel at once affronted and motivated. They, too, have come a long way, further than expected. In that regard they have nothing to lose, or nothing except a nation's foolishly attached pride.

India's strength lies in the depth and vigour of their batting. Sachin Tendulkar remains the master of all he surveys, but though the spotlight is still on him the pressure has been spread wider. Virender Sehwag is properly fit again, Virat Kohli looks at home, Suresh Raina will take confidence from his vital innings against Australia, and Mahendra Dhoni knows his mustard.

Having outstared doom against Australia, the Indians may conclude their time has come. Advised by a government minister to avoid match-fixing, the Pakistanis may feel at once affronted and motivated Nevertheless Yuvraj Singh is regarded as the most dangerous batsman. Already he has taken three Man-of-the-Match awards in this World Cup. Previously dismissed as a swiper with an inflated reputation, Yuvraj has emerged as a powerful and destructive batsman with a sturdy temperament. Nowadays he keeps the ball on the floor and looks fitter. His bowling has helped because it means he can be certain of his place and knows that whatever happens with the bat, he will contribute to the cause. Allrounders have a lot on their plate but less on their mind.

Like all the teams, India has batted without contrivance. Besides showing that 50-over cricket is alive and well, this tournament has also confirmed that cricket does not change all that much, remains a game between bat and ball, and that the laws of physics ought to be respected. The main asset needed by batsmen is the ability to flick the ball pitching on middle and heading towards leg away to the boundary with a neat roll of the wrists. Dilscoops, reverse sweeps, open-chested straight hits and the other innovations have been notable by their absence. They are too unreliable. The basics are back in business.

India's weakness is their bowling. One wag on ESPNcricinfo has suggested that India has been devastated by the news that Ashish Nehra and Munaf Patel are fit. A year or two ago India seemed to have a cupboard full of promising pacemen. Now the shelves seem almost empty. It is hard to avoid thinking that premature exposure to the good life takes a toll. Fast bowling demands high levels of focus and fitness.

Nehra and Patel have been ineffective, a headache for a team that recognises the importance of the No. 7 position - which has been one of the main developments in the game these last few years - and so opts to field a five-pronged attack, and that's including Yuvraj. However, Zaheer Khan has been superb, especially with the old ball, and Harbhajan is steady and combative. Even so, the Pakistanis will feel they can dominate.

Pakistan's main asset is their bowling. Shahid Afridi is the leading wicket-taker in the tournament and Umar Gul has been the best speedster. Afridi career has taken more twists and turns than an Agatha Christie story, but in these twilight years he has found his true calling as a leader, purveyor of tight, flat legbreaks, and lower-order smiter - in which regard his head remains a little hot.

Gul has improved enormously in a short period. His work depends on rhythm. His stride is long and unless precise can leave him off balance at delivery. Armed with the new ball, he nowadays approaches the crease purposefully, uses his height, musters a fine pace and swings the ball away from the bat. Later he retains his accuracy but adds a concealed slower ball. In short, he is a handful. If he can take a couple of early wickets the balance of power might shift.

Pakistan's batting has been steadied by the recall of the two elders, Younis Khan and Misbah-ul-Haq. Not so long ago both were considered surplus to requirements - one of these quirks that seems to crop up more often in Pakistani cricket than in other dispensations. Now they walk out with the air of genial veterans tolerant of the wayward ways of youth and used to sorting out the messes they leave behind.

Pakistan's progress will also depend on the form shown by the mercurial Akmal brothers, Umar and Kamran. Both have cheerful round faces, lots of ability and the fearless outlook that makes the entire team dangerous. Afridi, too, can give the ball a wallop and will want to make up for his reckless dismissal in a previous match. Yet Asad Shafiq might hold the key because he brings skill and fortitude to his position at first wicket down. Some colleagues rely on mood and instinct but he sets a higher store by method and a technique tightened in the tape-ball contests in his childhood.

Both teams are capably coached and both are captained by characters expressing their contrasting traditions: Dhoni the cool, slightly detached and committed Indian and Afridi his impassioned, volatile and dangerous counterpart. Pakistan has every reason to be proud of its progress, whilst India can likewise be pleased that the pressures of favouritism and hosting the event have not so far told on them.

If Pakistan can get going it ought to be a cracker. But the main thing is that it is only a cricket match, a sporting encounter, an exhibition of nerve and skill, a contest at the mercy of the whims. The players will strive with every fibre in their bodies to rise to the occasion. The crowd faces the same challenge. Despite the foreboding, past performance indicates that all parties will bend over backwards to make sure that the meeting is as happy as is possible in a semi-final, an essentially mournful occasion, when much can be lost and nothing won.

Big Sur is located along Scenic Highway One approximately 150 miles south of San Francisco and 300 miles north of Los Angeles. Historically, the name Big Sur, was derived from that unexplored and unmapped wilderness area which lays along the coast south of Monterey. It was simply called El Sur Grande, The Big South. Today, Big Sur refers to that 90-mile stretch of rugged and awesomely beautiful coastline between Carmel to the north and San Simeon (Hearst Castle) to the south. Highway One winds along its length and is flanked on one side by the majestic Santa Lucia Mountains and on the other by the rocky Pacific Coast.

Although there were two Mexican land grants awarded in the 1830's, which included most of the area north of the Big Sur Valley, neither grantee settled on the land. It was little more than a century ago when the first permanent settlers arrived in Big Sur. In the following decades other hardy persons followed and staked out their homesteads.

The landmarks bear the names of many of those early settlers - Mt. Manuel, Pfeiffer Ridge, Post Summit, Cooper Point, Dani Ridge, Partington Cove and others. Some of their descendants still live in Big Sur.

At the turn of the century Big Sur sustained a larger population than it does today. A vigorous redwood lumbering industry provided livelihoods for many. The Old Coast Trail, which had been the only link between homesteads, was still little more than a wagon trail. Steamers transported heavy goods and supplies and harbored at Notley's Landing, Partington Cove, and the mouth of the Little Sur River.

Navigation was treacherous, and in 1889, the Point Sur Lighthouse Station began sending its powerful beam to protect ships from the hazards of the coastline.

In 1937, the present highway was completed after eighteen years of construction at a considerable expense even with the aid of convict labor. The highway has since been declared California's first Scenic Highway, and it provides a driving experience unsurpassed in natural beauty and scenic variety.

Electricity did not arrive in Big Sur until the early 1950's, and it still does not extend the length of the coast or into the more remote mountainous areas.

The proximity of the Pacific Ocean provides for a temperate climate. Winters are mild, and rainy days are interspersed with periods of bright sunshine. An average rainfall of over 50 inches fills the many streams that flow down the redwood-lined canyons. Coastal fog cools the summer mornings, but it usually lifts by early afternoon. The best weather is often during the spring and fall.

It is wise to include both warm and cold weather clothing when packing for Big Sur. A damp, foggy morning can be followed by a warm afternoon. In the interior valleys of the Wilderness Area, the temperatures are more extreme; the fog bank seldom crosses the coast ridge, so the days are likely to be hot and the nights chilly.

The scenic qualities and the natural grandeur of the coast which result from the imposing geography, the rich vegetative compositions, and the dramatic meetings of land and sea are the area's greatest single attraction to the public. Big Sur has attained a worldwide reputation for its spectacular beauty. Hiking, backpacking and scenic driving are major recreational activities.

Drive carefully. Highway One is one of the best maintained roads in the world, but its sharp curves and steep hills still preclude high speed driving. This breathtaking stretch of coastline has something to offer any visitor. So relax and enjoy the awesome beauty of the timeless Big Sur Coast.

I live closer to Hwy 2. It ran through the forest in the middle of town.
Here is that forest burning down, as seen from outer space. I am

From Dr. Madrid:

Dear Bruce:

Thank you very much for your [excellent] report of our signal in Radio Verdad. Your name and address was registered by us in November 2004. I am replying your letter until today, because I am receiving very many reports.

Our transmitter was fully repaired by Canadian Missionary Engineer Ralph Borthwick last week, and now we are transmitting with 700 watts power and using a special and very effective antenna designed by Eng.
Borthwick. I am going to seng you our new commemoration QSL Card and our "Radio Pack", but I may delay a while to send it due to the many reports I am receiving. Your good report encourages us to continue eagerly with our good labor on Radio Truth.

Please pray God for a new problem we are facing from three days ago:
We have discovered a carrier signal over our signal with no audio on it. We hope our Lord Jesus gets such a "phanthom" signal disapeared.
Such a signal has been reported to us from USA, Finland, Germany, New Zeland and we detected it on the coast of Guatemala. It started about three days ago (I have not detected it tonight).

May God bless you richly.

I'm not sure that locating it would be of much value anyway. How much power would they have to neutralize it? If it's malicious, they might just need to wait it out. If it's not, they might just need to change the freq again (although I'm sure they'd rather not go through that process again so soon).

Too late. Bush already cost us every friend we ever had when he started the Iraq war. I guess TV in the Philippines must not have broadcast those worldwide protests against Bush. You obviously didn't see them.

I also presume you did not hear a few months ago when the Mayor of London recommended Bush didn't come there or there would be a good chance that Bush could be arrested as a war criminal.

Well, I don't give a damn about whether a bunch of disenchanted yahoos wants to impeach him. I wanted to impeach that rat Bush too, but we didn't. That;s beside the point. Your topic implied that he's making international enemies. The recent polls show otherwise.

I just read the link you put up, BTW.

I don't disagree that he has arguably committed an impeachable act with this Libya thing. What is ridiculous, though, is that this website has this "fact check" thing which is anything but. Instead of presenting facts, it substitutes opinions and predictions. That won't win an argument with any logical person - it will only draw huzzahs from people who are already convinced, no matter how flimsy the evidence.

Stop pretending. If you have something on him, say so. If you don't but are just biased against Obama, then admit it.

Like every wide band radio it's too sensitive on HF, and lacks meaningful front-end bandpass filtering (0-30 MHz is the first Octave). That being said, it's a decent performer on HF, on a par with any other decent single conversion receiver. I can get Sackville using my VHF/UHF Hustler discone as an HF antenna.

The reason I bought the radio is that it has wide band FM that is tunable between 470-806 (TV audio) where Low Power Auxiliaries play.

That being said, I don't like Obama very much. He is a warmonger, same

Most wars do start for fairly stupid reasons . For instance : the Hundred Year War , Spanish - American War , Russo-Japanese War , WW
I . A soldier that refuses given orders is normally court-martialled . Nothing noble here whatsoever .

Seems slightly immature. The same people who tell Obama what to do are the ones who told Bush what to do. Did you like Bush? Near as I can tell, they are the same president.

The only difference between the Rs and the Ds is what happens to the pennies on the dollar called "discretionary" spending. They make a big show fighting over the scraps while the military robs us of 3 billion dollars a day. Both parties shovel that money out the door.

The Spanish American war was started by Randolph Hurst and his media empire. He was rewarded with over ten million acres of Mexican land for his efforts. There were rumours around that he also blew up the Maine. Nothing like an atrocity to fan the flames. The technique should be familiar to Reichstag fire or 9/11 watchers.

The US government grabbed huge chunks of formerly Spanish holdings as spoils of war. There were 500 thousand Philippinos murdered. Many villages were burned to the ground.

That war, like most others, were started for someone's monetary GAIN.

Good evening friends!

Tonight The Crystal Ship will take to the airwaves on 6815 kHz AM, starting up between 2230 and 2300 UTC.

The theme this evening is-- wait for it-- that's right, "class warfare". Radical has a new "Shots from the Portside", Ronald Reagan campaigns for Democrats and the working man in 1948, and other assorted bits.

When I was in boot camp, one of those 90 day wonders (Second Lewey) randomly picked out a few of us lean mean fighting machines, because he was checking out a lie detector gizmo.He had to put some kind of salve stuff on my fingere so that lie detector could get a reading.
I was tested, I passed.

I wants to test an old Ferrari Testarosa car.
